"I AM READY TO MEET MY FATE," HE TELLS MOTHER

Bertram G. Spencer, convicted of murder in the first degree for the killing of Miss Martha B. Blackstone, a Springfield school teacher, and who has been in a death cell in the Charlestown State Prison for about a week, must die in the electric chair early next week.

The last hope of Spencer and his relatives was dissipated today when Governor Foss declined to refer the case to the Executive Council.

SAYS HE'S READY TO MEET FATE.

Spencer this afternoon heard from his mother's lips that the Council had taken no action to save him from the electric chair.

Without any show of emotion she told him that the Governor and his Council had taken no action on their petition for commutation. Spencer received his mother smilingly. He heard his fate without a tremor. He said:

"I expected nothing different, mother, and was prepared for the news that you bring me. I want to thank you and Mr. Stapleton, my counsel, for all you have done on my behalf.

"Now, mother, don't worry any more about me. I am ready to meet my fate."

Mrs. Spencer remained in the cell with her son for some time. The deputy warden retired, leaving her alone with Spencer and the guards.

Attorney Visits Prisoner Again.

Attorney Richard P. Stapleton, counsel for Spencer, visited Spencer late this afternoon.

After the adjournment of the Executive Council today, it not having had the Spencer case referred to it, Governor Foss was asked if he had anything to say about it.

"Well," he replied with a finality that sealed Spencer's fate, "there is nothing more to be said about it."

"Then this means that Spencer must die?" a reporter queried.

"There is nothing more to be said about it," repeated the Governor.

The murder of Miss Blackstone took place at the home of the Dow family in the Round Hill district of Springfield, where she was visiting, and was the climax of a series of startling burglaries by a masked man who for a year had terrorized the city.

Women Attack Him.

In the room when Spencer, masked and armed, walked into it were Miss Blackstone, two Miss Dows and their mother. The women screamed and began to attack him. He shot Miss Blackstone dead and wounded one of the Miss Dows, who recovered and testified against Spencer at his trial.

It was sought to show that Spencer had inherited insanity; also that his father had beaten him in such a brutal manner when he was a boy that his mind became at times unbalanced. The insanity plea failed.

It is probable that Spencer will be electrocuted shortly after midnight Tuesday morning. He has embraced Christian Science and is reported to be resigned to the inevitable.

Mother Sobs at News.

Mrs. Spencer, the mother of the condemned young man, was at the State House today when the Governor by his inaction doomed her son. Mr. Stapleton, Spencer's attorney, of Holyoke, informed her of the failure of their efforts. She

DOUBLE SHOOTING IN HOTEL

Love rekindled in the heart of a young man and a former sweetheart after he had become engaged to another was the romance that lay behind the West End tragedy early today when Frank Ogelvie of Melrose murdered Mabel Slayton and then turned the weapon on himself with deadly effect.

The double shooting, which the police believe to have been the result of a death pact, took place in the Preble House on Court street. Neither was dead when found following the excitement attendant upon the firing of the shots. They were rushed to the Relief Hospital. The girl died at 2:40 a. m. Ogilvie died at 8 a. m.

The name of the young woman to whom Ogilvie was engaged has not been made public. She lives in Melrose. It is said that she learned of the death of her fiance today and that the shock prostrated her.

Ogelvie had been a sailor. He was a stalwarth young man of attractive appearance. At one time he paid attention to Mabel Slayton. It is believed they were engaged to be married. There was a quarrel, it is thought, and the two became separated.

Bought Song Sheet.

In the meantime the young man met a Melrose girl, fell in love with her and they became engaged to be married. Then Ogelvie, the police believe, met Mabel Slayton by chance. They made up and went to a theatre together.

Under the influence of the music their love was revived. But the young man

BULGARIANS OPEN FIRE ON THE TURKS

VIENNA, Sept. 11.—Fighting has broken out on the Turko-Bulgarian frontier, according to messages received from Constantinople and Sofia today. It is said the Bulgarians opened hostilities by firing from a frontier fort upon a Turkish patrol. The Turks returned the fire, killing five Bulgarians. The battle raged all day, with many casualties. Bulgaria has sent an ultimatum to the powers to the effect that unless Turkey grants autonomy to Macedonia, a Turko-Bulgarian war is inevitable.

Hot Enough? Good Old Summer Here: Cooler Tomorrow

"A general air of depression" was to blame for the sufferings of half a million Bostonians under the torrid rays of the sun today, according to the Weather Bureau. In the stilly hours of the night this "general air" crept up and caught Bostonians all unawares.

Mrs. Mary Sullivan, seventy, was overcome with the heat while waiting for a train in the Central square station of the Cambridge subway today. She was hurried to the Cambridge Relief Hospital. She lives at No. 21 Derry street, Cambridge.

The air was "dead." There was hardly enough of it to turn a feather. And through this shell of dead air the sun poured its rays with mid-Summer-like intensity. The mercury soared up to the 89 mark at 1 p. m. and threatened to make a strong bid for the eleventh of September record, which is 90. Bostonians hoped and prayed that it wouldn't be successful.

But it may be cooler tomorrow, the weather man said. There is also a chance that cooling showers will arrive with the dawn of tomorrow.

The humidity today was not high, the recorder reading 60, or one per cent. below normal.

TO SEARCH CRETIC FOR STOWAWAYS ON TIP TO OFFICIALS

A tip reached the immigration officials of this city to look out for stowaways on the Cretic which reached quarantine today, from Mediterranean ports. The shore officials wired to the boat before she came to her dock, asking if there were any stowaways on board, and received a reply there were not. This is the boat on which twenty-seven stowaways were found last Spring. A careful search of the vessel was arranged to take place when she reached her dock. A straw vote of the cabin passengers was taken with the following result: Taft, 21; Roosevelt, 30; Wilson, 90. The votes of the women stood: Taft, 10; Roosevelt, 24; Wilson, 70. Among the prominent passengers were: Andre Caplet, director of music of the Boston Opera House; Professor Frederick Hopkins, director of art education of Massachusetts, returning from the Dresden International Congress; John P. Marshall, professor of music at Boston University, and Mrs. Marshall; A. Bannini, of the Boston Symphony Orchestra; Rev. J. H. Metcalf and family of Winchester, who had an audience with the Pope, and J. F. McGrath and family of Woburn.

MANY NATIONALITIES IN BOSTON SCHOOLS.

Two little Chinese girls—Isabel and Dorothy Wille—who are enrolled in the Quimby School on Tyler street.

Back to the Boston public schools today went more than 103,000 children.

In thousands of homes youngsters got up after many weeks vacation to face tasks instead of play. Hundreds arose with eager anticipation, for were they not going to school for the first time? If some set out with hearts a little heavy for play days over, many more turned their steps gladly lesson-ward.

Once more the streets at morning and at noon were filled with the army of pupils big and little. In the closely built up districts special policemen guarded the crossings to herd the youngsters through

TINKHAM BACK, SAYS GERMANS LOOK FOR WILSON'S ELECTION

State Senator George Holden Tinkham of Boston returned on board the Kronprinz Wilhelm, at New York, after two months sojourn in Europe.

"In Germany, especially, the general consensus of opinion is that Mr. Wilson will be the successful candidate for the Presidency because of the split in the Republican party," said Mr. Tinkham. "They, over there, are pleased at the probability thus afforded of a change of administration and the revision of the tariff to a much lower level. They seemed to be amused at the action of the United States on the Panama bill. In England, of course, they are chagrined, but other Europeans look with interest and amusement upon the situation."

HOTEL STRIKERS TURN TO SWIFT

The executive committee of the Boston Branch of the Hotel Workers' Union met today and drafted a request that Attorney-General Swift make a ruling as to whether the 54-hour law applies to women and minors working in hotels. If it does he will then be called upon to enforce the law in hotels.

Attorney J. Panker, counsel for the International Hotel Workers' Union, arrived in Boston today. He had been summoned by the Boston union co-ordinator with its counsel, Thomas G. Connolly, and the executive committee regarding the strike situation here. He declared emphatically, however, that he was not to supplant Mr. Connolly and that Mr. Connolly would have full charge. He was astonished at finding women serving liquors in a restaurant where he stopped for dinner. He said:

"This as police conditions are said to be in New York there is not one policeman who would dare to remain inactive should he see a woman serving liquors or working in a room where liquors are being served in New York.

"In New York the law forbids women serving liquors or working in rooms where they are being served. If such a condition should be found in New York, the proprietor would be summoned before the excise commissioners and his license revoked immediately."

At the New American House, where employes struck last night, Mr. Jones, the proprietor, said today:

"Prior to the strike I had a perfect understanding with my men. They agreed not to leave their work, no matter how many duties were shown. I placed an order with Mr. Waddell, the New York strike-breakers' leader, for more men than had left my service, and I am in a position today to conduct my business as efficiently as ever before.

President Edgar Pierce of the Whipple chain of hotels said: "There has been no change in the position taken by the J. Reed Whipple Company at the meeting yesterday in Tremont Temple."

EXPECT GRAND JURY REPORT ON DYNAMITE PROBE ON SATURDAY

The Suffolk County Grand Jury this afternoon resumed its investigation of the alleged planting of dynamite at Lawrence during the strike. Among the new witnesses that may appear are members of the committee of Public Safety of Lawrence.

The following were summoned to appear as witnesses today:

Henry Bradford Lewis, a Lawrence manufacturer, living in Athol.

James B. Bailey, secretary to President Wood.

Walter Lamont of Andover.

Otis L. Shuttleworth, owner of the Washington mills.

New developments are expected as District Attorney Pelletier has broadened the scope of the inquiry which has already resulted in the indictment of two men prominent in the industrial world.

The inquest will probably continue throughout the week, and it is expected that the Grand Jury will report Saturday.

It is declared that evidence has been found to confirm a story said to have been told to District Attorney Pelletier by Ernest W. Pitman, the Lawrence contractor who committed suicide.

FIND CORNERSTONE OF OLD COURTHOUSE

The cornerstone of the old courthouse, tought ever since the demolition of the building was begun a year ago, was found today by A. Prevett, foreman, and Frank Bray, assistant, of the Wells Brothers Company, contractors for the new City Hall annex which is to be built on the site. A workman trying to raise a heavy stone discovered a hole and through it found a metal box containing the stornerstone documents. The box was removed and taken to the office of the contractors, where it will be opened.

ALASKA GOLD STOCK MISSING

Six hundred shares of Alaska Gold Mines, valued at $5,400, have been lost or stolen. They are New York certificates, Nos. 100-165, inclusive, and transfer has been stopped. Whoever has them in his possession, or knows anything about them, should notify Hayden, Stone & Co. at once.

These shares were recently listed on the Curb and Hayden, Stone & Co. had announced that certificates would be ready for delivery at their office in exchange for temporary receipts on and after 10 a. m. today. Subsequently the banking house discovered that the 600 shares are missing.

The stock sold above 9 on the Boston Curb Exchange today. The Alaska Gold Mines have attracted a great deal of attention, as the property is a prospect which has inspired optimistic views on the part of such conservative experts as Messrs. Jackling and Holden.

Curb dealings in the shares have already been heavy.

the traffic. In the schoolrooms 3,000 teachers prepared for new faces. The big buildings all over the city buzzed with the activity of the The First Day of School.

The school authorities expected the biggest registration in the history of the city. In some districts there was overcrowding. In East Boston between 700 and 800 more pupils than formerly applied for places. The district now uses eight portable school houses, but it is hoped the two new schools, the U. S. Grant and the Commodore Harry, opened last Spring but not filled, will take care of much of the overflow. The authorities expect to do away with several of the portables soon. About 10,590 children were accommodated in the Adams, Lyman, Everett and Chapman schools today.

In Roxbury, bigger classes than ever poured into the grammar and primary schools. The masters in the district are sure, however, that when things get straightened out there will be room for all. Jamaica Plain, Roslindale and West Roxbury also reported larger entering classes.

The Roxbury High School is filled uncomfortably full, but it is only for a season. By the first of October the annex will be finished, then the pupils now accommodated in the halls will have plenty of room.

Charlestown has no overcrowding problem this year, and the registration does not vary greatly from years past, though the High school probably will have a few more students than before. Four hundred and fifty took up their work there today. About 3,500 children were accommodated in the Bunker Hill, Frothingham, Harvard, Prescott and Warren schools. More pupils, of course, will appear before the end of the week.

Dorchester has what is believed to be its largest registration ever. All pupils were accommodated, but in some buildings the rooms were crowded to their capacity. The Mary Hemenway School on Adams street will be crowded for a time, as the new Beaumont street primary school building is not ready yet. The Mather School on Meeting House Hill has a large entrance list, but all were seated.

There was a big registration in the Roger Wolcott School, Mattapan, a fast growing section of Dorchester, but this was relieved somewhat by the new Bradford School on Willowood street. The big Oliver Wendell Holmes School also was filled.

From the Practical Arts High School on Meeting House Hill several girls were transferred to the Practical Arts School in Roxbury on account of crowded conditions.

Every child saluted the American flag on entering its own room. In the second grade there is not one American child. Chinese children sit alongside of Syrian, Armenian and Greek children and a few Jews.

SPENCER TOLD HE MUST DIE

sobbed, and for a time it looked as though she would collapse.

Later Mrs. Spencer and the lawyer left in an automobile.

The Rev. Father Michael J. Murphy, the Catholic chaplain at the prison, visited Spencer today. It was said that a reader of the Christian Science Church will spend some time with him before the end.

Present Four Affidavits.

Lawyer Stapleton presented four affidavits leading to show that Spencer is not in his right mind. He presented the affidavits of George Carpenter and Frank A. Allen, guards at he Springfield jail who have had Spencer in their immediate custody since the trial.

These affidavits allege that Spencer is subject to maniacal outbursts without any apparent cause; that at times he is as simple as a child and appears to be unsuscepttible to any form of reason; that he talks incoherently and acts at times as a man without his senses. Mr. Stapleton also presented the affidavit of Edward Jackson of Bristol, Ct., who saw Spencer while in the throes of an insane outburst when a boy. Jackson is a witness discovered since the date of the trial.

The affidavit of Walter Henry Harlow of Irisburg, Vt., who knew Spencer when he was in the infirmary at Mt. Hermon, was also presented. He alleges in his affidavit that Spencer had a nervous breakdown and had several insane outbreaks. Harlow is a trained nurse who specializes in the care of insane patients. He is also a witness discovered since the date of the trial.

Victim of Circumstances.

Stapleton, in his interview with the Governor, said that Spencer was a victim of circumstances and genuinely would never have been transferred from the insane hospital except for the disclosures which were brought about by means of conditions existing there.

The Council was in session but a short while, and according to Councilor Goetting no mention whatsoever was made of the Spencer case.

After the close of the session Attorney Stapleton was presented with a special delivery letter from a prominent business man of New Haven, Ct., who does not want his name disclosed. He was a classmate of Spencer's in a private high school in New Haven. He wrote that he had noticed signs of insanity in Spencer on frequent occasions. He also gave the names of the classmates of Spencer who are ready to give testimony to the effect.

Mr. Stapleton will secure the affidavits of these men and will present them to the Governor at the earliest possible date.

There will be no meeting of the Executive Council between today and Sunday. The next regular meeting will be held on Wednesday, September 18.

Mrs. Spencer today made a final appeal to Governor Foss and Councillors Goetting and McGregor to save her son from death. Neither Mrs. Spencer did not personally see the Governor, but her counsel, Richard P. Stapleton, had an audience with him lasting ten minutes in which he submitted a number of affidavits while Mrs. Spencer waited in the Governor's office.

Mother Waits Outside.

Governor Foss was aware of Mrs. Spencer's presence outside his office, however. He said in view of the fact that he had already spoken with Mrs. Spencer about the case, he begged to be excused from giving her another audience today.

Mrs. Spencer personally spoke to Councillors Goetting and McGregor for several minutes. Mrs. Spencer said:

"I am trying to bear up and be brave, but I am afraid that if the council refuses to commute the sentence of my son I shall not be able to survive the shock.

"I realize that there is hostility against my son in the western part of the State. This is due to the fact that the people do not know the true condition of my boy. If they did know, they would sympathize with him rather than hold resentment against him."

The attorneys for Chester Jordan, condemned to die the week beginning September 22 for the murder of his wife, have appealed to the Governor for the appointment of a commission to examine the prisoner's mental state. Harvey W. Pratt, of the attorneys, declared that while Jordan may have been sane at the time of the killing, he is insane now. It is contended the prisoner is suffering from a progressive disease of the spine which is bound to affect his mind in time, and the lawyer insists the disease has progressed so far Jordan is insane already.

Richard B. Stapleton of Springfield, counsel for Spencer, has presented to the Governor certain new evidence, which he asserts, shows Spencer is insane. The evidence is in the form of affidavits from jail officials who have cared for Spencer since his imprisonment, and from two men who knew the condemned man intimately, one, Walter H. Harlow of Irasburg, Vt., a trained nurse in insanity cases, who took care of Spencer at one time.

Governor Foss is said to be in possession of the finding of Attorney-General Swift regarding the insanity aspect of the Spencer case. Mr. Swift conducted Spencer's trial and succeeded in convincing the jury Spencer was sane when he shot Martha Blackstone.

Spencer looked forward today to a visit from his wife and little son. He expected them yesterday, but they did not come from Springfield. His mother will call at the death cell as she has for the last several days, and Mr. Stapleton doubtless will carry to the prisoner tidings of the latest developments in the fight to save the condemned man.

was bound to another. They bought a piece of music which bore the title, "Let's Forget We Ever Met." This was found in the room in the hotel. These words in the song were underscored: "Until we say good-bye."

Next clocks were found showing that they had been at the theatre. They also carried some food to the room of the hotel in which they registered shortly after midnight.

Heard Two Shots.

Clerk Clifford Foster assigned them to a room on the office floor. A short time afterward, W. C. Millett, another clerk, who had just gone on duty, heard two revolver shots and traced them to the room occupied by the couple.

The door was bolted and Millett called Patrolmen John J. McDonald and Frank Merritt. When the door was forced Ogelvie was found lying on the bed and the woman was on the floor at the foot of the bed. Both were unconscious and were taken to the Relief Hospital.

A thirty-eight caliber revolver was found lying on the bed where it had fallen. On the table was a box of cartridges, some belongings of the woman and several pictures. The police declared that some of them were pictures of the woman.

There was an account book in the back of which was written, "If lost return to Frank E. Ogelvie, East Side Ice Company, Hunnewell avenue, Melrose." A Melrose friend later called at the hospital and identified the man as Ogelvie. He is twenty-one.

Seek Woman's Address.

Charles E. Swain of the East Side Ice Company, Melrose, said he employed Ogelvie since last Spring as a driver, Ogelvie, according to Mr. Swain, lived with his mother on Hunnewell avenue, and was well known in Melrose. On Saturday night Mr. Swain said Ogelvie quit work.

The police are endeavoring to locate friends of the woman.

Ogelvie had been engaged as a brakeman by the Boston & Maine Railroad and was to have started work today. He left home yesterday with the intention of coming to Boston after his uniform, telling his mother that he would return for dinner.

When he failed to come home last night, Mrs. Ogelvie tried to get him on the telephone, she was awakened at 5 o'clock this morning and told of the shooting.

Mrs. Ogelvie is a widow. Frank E. Ogelvie was her only son.

Charles E. Swain, who had employed Ogelvie at the ice company, said:

Was Quick Tempered.

"Ogelvie was a loyed by me and was a good workman and conscientious. He was always known as a good boy. He left my employ last Saturday to go to work for the Boston & Maine. I noticed that he was acting in a peculiar manner for about two weeks, but thought nothing of it. He was quick tempered, but it was only necessary to speak calmly to him and he would regain his composure.

Ogelvie is a native of Malden. He enlisted in the navy and cruised around the world with the fleet. It was here that he had his name tattooed on his arm, which led to his identity.

Made New Home for Mother.

Ogelvie had just made a new home for his mother in Melrose. She had been employed as housekeeper for Charles E. Swain, proprietor of the East Side Ice Company, by whom he was employed also as a driver. About a month ago he said: "Mother, let us have a home of our own. I don't like to see you working here as housekeeper."

And so they rented a little cottage at No. 24 Hunnewell avenue, owned by Mrs. H. Polk. Neighbors say that Ogelvie would stay home every evening. He would get his mother to play on the piano and he would sing, they said. He impressed them as being particularly home loving.

The dead girl was about twenty-one years of age. A sailor identified her. He was positive it was she because part of her thumb was cut off.

The girl's sister, Mrs. Agnes E. Slade, lives on Commercial street, North Sydney, Cape Breton.

The Song Found Beside Bodies.

The following are the words of the song found beside the murdered girl and her slayer, with the line "When we say goodbye" underscored:

LET'S FORGET WE EVER MET.

I.

There comes a time in every life
When sunshine fades away.
And shadows come to change the scene,
Where once 'twas bright and gay:
Two loving hearts may drift apart
In some peculiar way,
Perhaps 'twere better left unsaid
Those parting words you say.

II.

There's something in your last request
I fear you never be,
Because the love I bear for you
Will live and die with me.
Your favors of the past I've done,
To show my love was true,
But now you ask a single one
Beyond my power to do.

CHORUS.

Let's forget we ever met,
When we say good-bye.
The best of friends must part some day,
Just as you and I.
The sunshine comes and the sunshine goes,
Just like the fading of the rose.
Let's forget we ever met,
When we say good-bye.

16,000 PUPILS IN CAMBRIDGE SCHOOLS

With an attendance of 16,000 pupils, an increase of 1,044 over last year, the Cambridge public schools were opened today. The new Thorndike School on Spring and Seventh streets cared for many of the children. The opening of the new structure does away with the old Thorndike, Lassells and Otis schools. Michael E. Fitzgerald, the new superintendent of schools, was on hand early in caring for the children.

SAY FOSS' MESSENGER TOLD LODGE SECRETS

Governor Foss' colored messenger, William Reed, entered suit in the Suffolk Superior Court today against Frank E. Turpin and other officers of the Prince Hall Grand Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, of Massachusetts, and Eureka Lodge, to keep the lodge from expelling him. He asks for an injunction, and Judge Hardy issued an order of notice returnable tomorrow. Reed has been a member for twenty-two years. He brought a previous suit against the Grand Lodge, which was heard before a master. At this hearing the defendants claimed that Reed violated the rules of the order and gave away the secrets of the organization. Reed denies the charges.

The New Filene Store

1,430,000 Feet in Six Days

DURING the first business week of the new Filene store more than 715,000 men, women or children entered these doors.

More than the entire population of Boston proper thus became our great public guest.

More than we expected by many thousands.

More than we deserved if we depart one iota from the high standards that we have set for ourselves as servants of that public.

Shoes? Seven Specialty Shops for Many Millions of Feet!

PERHAPS in no branch of this business has specialization proceeded to such length and breadth as in the new shoe shops.

Not only is there a specialty shoe shop or two for every member of the family. In each such shop is every right kind of shoe for any kind of a foot so far as we have been able to apply many years of shoe-sense to such undertaking.

Men who know the shoe shops of the world have come to us and declared wonderingly that never have they seen the like of these shops as a whole or singly.

Seven Shoe Shops

WOMEN—Fifth floor. (Don't blame us for being a bit proud of this shop and its contents.)

YOUNG WOMEN AND GIRLS—Fourth floor. (Especial emphasis on shoes for school and college.)

YOUNG GIRLS AND BABIES—Third floor. (All good kinds of shoes for children, from the first soft-sole to size eleven.)

MEN—Second floor. (Hear so many good things about this shop our ears burn sometimes!)

BOYS—Second floor. (So that Young America may continue to speed up without hurting father's bank account.)

MEN'S AND BOYS'—Automatic Bargain Basement. (Where prices wear out automatically and shoes take their time about it.)

WOMEN'S AND CHILDREN'S—Automatic Bargain Basement. (Where market over plus is represented by price underplus.)

All right! Let the other man say it. We shall not do our own boasting. We prefer to have our public come in and see and say the good things.

Suffice it to remark that here the business of shoe-fitting and selling has passed the slipshod stage and has reached the scientific.

This without added cost. On the contrary, at lessened cost.

For the basic element of shoe-selling science is economy that makes for quality.

This constitutes our invitation to you to come in and see what is going forward shoewise in any or all of the Seven Shoe Shops.

—One of the many service features of the Seven Shoe Shops is a chiropodist. His services are at the disposal of the foot-sore and weary.

FOSS PARDONS INNOCENT MAN

Sentenced to from four to six years for burglaries it is alleged he never committed, Herman Dudley, a prisoner at the Charlestown State Prison since June, 1911, was today set free by Warden Bridges, following the receipt of a pardon from Governor Foss and the Executive Council.

The pardon was granted after information had been given to Governor Foss and his council by District Attorney Higgins of Middlesex County that a man who was dying in a hospital had confessed the crime for which Dudley was serving a sentence.

Dudley's mother was at the prison when the news of the pardon was broken to her son. When she caught sight of him as he entered the guardroom Mrs. Dudley stepped forward with outstretched arms and sobbed: "My boy! my boy!" The scene brought tears to the eyes of those who witnessed it.

Dudley was found "guilty" in the East Cambridge Superior Court. He pleaded not guilty. He has since protested his innocence. The breaks, supposed to have been committed by him, were in Cambridge.

Lately District Attorney Higgins was told of the confession of a man who was dying in a hospital. The conscience of the man was touched. He wanted to make a clean breast of the affair. He knew that Dudley was serving the sentence for the crime he committed, he said.

District Attorney Higgins investigated his story. It was then that he brought the matter to the attention of Governor Foss and the Executive Council, which acted today.

Mrs. Dudley and her son left the prison at noon for their home in East Cambridge.

The Squantum Female

By MORTON BIRGE

You know that place called Squantum, seagirt Squantum down the bay,
Where one lugs lanterns after dark with which to find the way.
It seems that Squantum women now succeed where husbands fail.
The female down at Squantum is some smarter than the male.

The women asked their menfolk to select a clubhouse site.
The husbands put their wits to work and thought with all their might.
The net result was nothing, so the women started in
And picked a site so easy, just like picking up a pin.

The women took an option on a nifty piece of land.
They named a wise committee and the plans are well in hand;
The deal is all but finished and it now looks like a sale.
The female down at Squantum has more hustle than the male.

CREED NAMED AS ASSOCIATE JUSTICE

Governor Foss today appointed Michael J. Creed of South Boston an associate justice of the Boston Municipal Court. The place was created by the Legislature last year when the associate justices were increased to eight. The name of Mr. Creed went to the Executive Council for confirmation.

Taft Plays Golf; Then Plans Annual Visit to Aunt Delia

President Taft spent a lively day today at his Beverly Summer home. Bright and early, in spite of the heat, the President, his daughter Helen and Major Rhodes, his aide, motored over to the Myopia club at Hamilton and enjoyed a good threesome at golf. The President wasn't up to his usual good game on account of that sore ankle. He didn't allow himself to get beaten very badly, however.

The afternoon was given up to a few personal callers. Former Congressman Charles B. Washburn of Worcester, came down to see the President. Rev. Henry A. Tapper of New York, had a conference over the Peace Movement. Former Secretary of the Navy Frank W. Hackett of Portsmouth, N. H., was another caller.

President Taft will pay his annual visit to Aunt Delia Torrey at Millbury this week. The President is "Aunt Delia's" favorite nephew and he can always find a pantry stocked with the best. Mrs. Taft and probably the Taft boys will accompany the President on this visit. They will motor to Millbury by way of Worcester, leaving Beverly early Saturday afternoon.

BECKER FIGHTS TRIAL OPENING

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—District Attorney Whitman is ready and determined to bring to trial tomorrow Police Lieutenant Charles Becker, now in the Tombs on charges of having conspired to slay Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, on July 16 by hired gunmen in front of the Hotel Metropole.

The case comes before Justice Goff in the criminal branch of the Supreme Court. Counsel for Becker are trying hard to prevent the opening of the trial and it is expected they will try to secure a stay of proceedings on the ground that the deposition of Lieut. Arthur Whitehead, [illegible] Ark., are needed in the case.

These witnesses, it is said, will give information regarding Sam Schepps that will, in effect, make him a witness for the defence. Should Becker's lawyers fail to secure a stay, it is said that they will try to obtain a change of venue tomorrow.

The decision in the case of former Inspector Cornelius G. Hayes, who was tried for having made false charges regarding Commissioner Waldo, is not expected for a week.

ELABORATE KENNEL FOR WHITMAN DOGS

Malcom D. Whitman, the Brookline millionaire and former amateur tennis champion, and his ten-million-dollar bride, who was Miss Jennie Crocker of California, are having an elaborate kennel built at the Fifth avenue home of Francis Burton Harrison that they have acquired for the Winter.

Society is interested. The "400" wants to see the sixty-three pedigreed dogs that the bride brought across from the Pacific Coast in a special car. And besides, a private dog show at a Fifth avenue mansion is something new for even New York.

LONDON CHALLENGE TO ROSE PITONOF

Rose Pitonoff of Dorchester, following her 16-mile swim in the Thames from Richmond to Tower Bridge, London, has been challenged by Miss Lily Smith, captain of the City of London Ladies' Swimming Team, for her swim across the English Channel.

The Richmond to London swim was just a little training stunt for Miss Pitonoff, English dispatches say, in preparation for her Channel attempt. To the girl who swam to Boston Light the sixteen-mile course was easy, and she made a record in the feat nobody of her sex ever accomplished.

UGH! NOT CALOMEL, OIL OR SALTS, BUT DELICIOUS "SYRUP OF FIGS"

Give your stomach, liver and 30 feet of bowels a thorough cleansing without gripe or nausea. Ends headache, biliousness, indigestion and constipation.

This wonderful fruit laxative acts as a liver and bowel cleanser—tonic—not as an irritant. Its action is natural and gentle—no griping. It is delicious—no dreading. It is positive and prompt—no waiting.

If your stomach is sour and filled with vile gases, your head aches, or you are bilious, nervous, dizzy, half sick, your tongue coated, your thirty feet of bowels clogged with waste not properly carried off—don't wait. Surely take a teaspoonful of delicious Syrup of Figs tonight, and in the morning all constipated waste, sour bile, gases and poisons will move on and out of the system, gently but thoroughly—no griping—no nausea—no weakness. In the old days people let these matters run until they needed a large dose of physic, then they took something severe, like castor oil, salts or cathartics, that meant abuse to the bowels. These are the days of the gentle and natural—the days of Syrup of Figs. This way you are not drugging yourself. Syrup of Figs being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics cannot cause injury.

Ask your druggist for "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," and look for the name, California Fig Syrup Company on the label. This is the genuine—old reliable. Any other so-called Fig Syrup is an imitation often meant to deceive you. Refuse such with contempt.

Tells of Kitchen Drudgery in Hotels

Conditions Intolerable, Says Striker

Annie Walters Says if Public Understood There Would Be Big Demand for Reform.

The striking hotel employes of Boston—waiters, porters, chambermaids and kitchen help—declare they are fighting for better working conditions and a living wage. A number of hotels have granted the demands of the dissatisfied workers. The strikers declare that if the public which patronizes the hotels could learn of the conditions under which the employes work, it would force the hotels to better conditions.

The AMERICAN, therefore, today prints the story of Annie Walters, kitchen worker in one of the big Boston hotels. Read her story—of the hours she has worked and of her working conditions—and decide if the dissatisfaction of the hotel workers is justified.

By ANNIE WALTERS.

My name is Annie Walters, and I am one of the hotel strikers.

I have worked at a well-known hotel for several years, and needn't be out of work today if I wished to break away from the union.

When the strike was called, and all the others walked out to enforce our demand for better conditions, the people at the hotel offered to give me $40 a month if I'd stay with them.

That is, they said they would give me that while the strike lasted, although they only used to pay me $20 a month. But I didn't stay for it. I wouldn't be a strike-breaker for twice that amount of money.

In one? sense I'm glad the strike was called, although I can't afford to lay idle very long. This has been the first real rest I have had since coming to this country from Ireland several years ago.

People used to tell us at home that America was the best country in the world for poor people. I haven't found it so up to the present time. The work has been harder and the hours longer than girls have to work there.

An 18-Hour Day.

When I was in Ireland we used to get at least one-half day a week off in service, and the work wasn't nearly so hard.

At the hotel where I worked here the kitchen girls have to start work at 5 o'clock in the morning on alternate week days, and they are on duty until midnight!

The following day we only work from noon until 6 o'clock, but unusually we are tired out with the previous day's hardships that the brief rest doesn't do us much good.

It's the same on alternate Sundays, when we work from 6 o'clock in the morning until 8 o'clock in the afternoon, and from 6 in the evening until midnight.

And such work—it's often a wonder to me how we stand up under it. The steam from the kettle and the odor from the overheated ovens often sickens me.

If the good people of this city could be made to realize what the women help at the hotels have to contend with, there wouldn't be any strike. They would compel the hotel proprietors to give us the betterments asked for by our union.

I don't know of any better way to describe our food than that used by the men who were alongside of me. They call it the "can't you, don't you" style of eating.

Says Food is Unpalatable.

This means that you simply can't and don't eat the food they supply the kitchen girls. You conclude, in the end, that it's easier and cheaper to buy the greater portion of your meals in some near-by restaurant, even if your wages are too low to allow you to do this with any degree of comfort.

I have read of ship wrecked sailors going mad when surrounded by water, and they drink from the effects of thirst. That's the way we kitchen girls feel, when compelled to eat the leftovers and cheap meats, while at the same time surrounded by high-class food being prepared for the guests.

The sleeping accommodations at the hotel I worked at were not so bad as those obtaining at some other Boston houses I know of, although we had to sleep two in a bed and two beds in a room.

At one of the highest priced hotels in the Back Bay, where they charge enormous sums for everything, the girl employes have to sleep ten in a room, and the windows are nailed down at the bottom. What would happen in case girls in cons of fire?

Popular Idea Wrong.

Some people think that kitchen work in a big hotel is carried on scientifically and according to more modern standards than in days gone by. This is not true, so far as the hotels of Boston are concerned. Everything still is done in the most primitive fashion imaginable.

Then, in addition to the long hours and poor food, the sanitary arrangements of almost every hotel kitchen in this city simply is vile.

Why, I have seen the cuspidors from the hotel bar-room washed in the same pan the dishes were washed in, although not in the same water. It simply is impossible for outsiders to conceive of the actual conditions existing below stairs, among the hotel help.

Our unios—and it is our union for we control it by our votes—asks that all female labor in these hotels be given a rational working day. Also that we be granted $5 a month increase in wages, given two days off a month, decent food and sanitary rooms in which to work and sleep.

Calls Attitude Unjust.

The hotel proprietors, not all of whom are bad at heart, simply refuse to give us what we ask for, and that's why we are out on strike. They have been so accustomed to regard us as pieces of machinery that they can't seem to see how unjust their present attitude is.

I used to think, when a little girl at home in far-off Ireland, that no wrong could exist for any length of time in this country.

The fact that there were no Lords and Ladies, no Kings or Queens, no landed aristocracy here was made much of over there.

But, somehow, the result is the same, if not worse. Kitchen work in the hotels of Boston is intolerable. The rule of the people, so far, hasn't given us any better results than the rule of the aristocrats.

Ask for Living Wage.

I am on strike because I want to live like a human being; to have decent food and a living wage; to secure a rational workday and bearable sanitary conditions; and to help my fellow-employes to get the same treatment that I demand for myself.

They tell us that the hotel proprietors will take up our grievances if we return to work as individuals. That isn't the way we came out. We came out as a body, and we ought to return as a body or not at all.

Nobody bothered about us kitchen girls before the union was formed, and I am convinced that the moment we gave up our union by going back to work as individuals all this talk of remedying our grievances would be lost sight of.

I am a union girl because the union promises to secure for us the things that make life worth the living; the things that are due every person who works for a living.

So far as I am concerned, now the strike is on, I shall vote against any settlement that does not give us the things that of a right belong to all.

ANNIE WALTERS, WHO DESCRIBES HOTEL CONDITIONS

WHO WILL WIN $10,000? WINNE FAMILY HUSTLING

It was Mrs. Winne who was the first to think what a splendid thing it would be for the Winnes to go in and win the $10,000 prize in the Sunday AMERICAN'S 500,000 club.

As far as that goes, it is always Mrs Winne who is planning and hoping and praying and building for the Winne family, just as it is mamma who plans and hopes and prays and builds for your family, and for every other family.

"For my part," Pa Winne said, "I'm content to stay right here. It is handy to the office, not too far from the boys' work, and, although the price is pretty stiff, well within our means. We have only to ask for repairs to have them made at once."

"But we're not saving anything," Ma Winne said.

"O, well!"

"And there are the girls to think of. Alma will be getting married, one of these days, and how nice it would be to have the wedding in our own home, out on the River Road, say, a modernized old-fashioned house, with broad piazzas all about it, and a great orchard and——"

"For goodness sake!" said Pa Winne, "Who's Alma going to marry? I didn't know there was anybody in particular."

"There isn't anybody in particular," Ma Winne said, "but there will be, John; the girl is only nineteen.'

$10,000 Prize Would Help.

"Plenty of time about the house, then," pa said, "why don't you be content, the same as I am? Why, we were one of the first tenants here when the Madison-Calvert was built."

"Twelve years ago," said ma.

"What of it?"

"What of it, John? Haven't you noticed how the building and the class of tenants has retrograded, how the neighborhood has run down? I do believe men are blind to such things."

"Well, how are we going to help it?" Pa Winne said.

"We can help it by going in for this big prize of the Sunday AMERICAN, determined to win it," ma said. "The Sunday AMERICAN is going to give $10,000 in cash to the man, woman or child who secures the largest number of subscriptions—votes. A six months' subscription counts for 1,500 votes; twelve months, 3,500; thirty-six months, 7,000 votes, and so on."

"Sounds good," John Winne said.

"It sound," Mrs. Winne said emphatically, "that we are going to win it."

"YOU are?" Her husband said.

"And YOU are going to help me," said his wife.

"How?"

"Every man in your lodge is going to subscribe for the Sunday AMERICAN through YOU!"

"Well, I guess the boys would," said Pa Winne.

"I KNOW they would," said Ma," after the way you've worked on every committee, at carnivals, theatricals and fairs; only, the thing is to get in first. Look at your membership roll. Call every one of them on the telephone tonight. And the children will have to help in the same way."

Children to Help.

"Huh," Pa Winne said, "the children don't belong to the B. P. O. E."

"No, they don't" Ma Winne said, "but Alma is one of the most popular girls in this town and she can coin that popularity into subscription-votes. Ned is captain of the ball team, which, as the boys tell it, has this season 'cleaned up' everything for miles around; local sentiment ought to help Ned with votes. Tom has been the fantastic coach for the young people of our church this past half-dozen years. There isn't a woman in this neighborhood that Jimmy hasn't gone every conceivable kind of errand for. Every one of them will come in for a vote. Even Katherine can help, through her school friends."

"Well, Pa," said Winne laughing, "you seem to have enlisted everybody but Aunt Anna."

Aunt Anna is Miss Anna Vying. She makes her home with the Winnes. She isn't much older than Alma Winne. She is employed in the co-operative bank and is just a little different dancer in town.

"I have thought of Anna," Ma Winne said, "and I expect that George Ashus and Edgar Willing and Ernest Henry ought to be good for several thousand votes apiece if I don't know, and Anna doesn't know, and they don't know, which of them she prefers, but I do know that she loves the children more than anybody else just at present, and when she hears that I intend to win this Sunday AMERICAN $10,000, and sees what it means, a home, college educations, and a little something in the bank, she is sure to pledge her help and it ought to be a great lift."

Pa Winne was convinced. He had been glancing over the Sunday AMERICAN'S list of 1,501 prizes.

Contest Open to All.

"Sweetheart," he said to Ma Winne, "count me in! I'm going out now and round up every friend I have. I'm going to have this whole town with us. Even if we DON'T get the $10,000 prize, we are sure to land the $1,000 for this district."

"Stop!" said Ma Winne. "I don't want to hear anything like that again from anybody in this family. There will be no $1,000 for us. We are going to win the $10,000. That is settled."

All through the supper hour Ma Winne kept her own council, but anybody with the eye could see that she was treasuring a great secret.

Not a word of it, though, until the table was cleared off and Alma and Katherine had done the dishes.

And then—isn't she just the dearest Mamma?—how do you suppose she started off?

She said, "Listen, dears—don't go, yet, Tom—I am going to have $10,000, and we are going to buy the Pearson place on the River Road, and Ned and Alma are going to college."

Wasn't that a fine way to begin telling them about the Sunday AMERICAN'S $10,000 prize and 500,000 Club, and don't you suppose everybody was interested from the jump?

And elsewhere in this number of the AMERICAN you can find all the details of the $10,000 prize and 1,500 other prizes, including five of $1,000 each. Also you will find an "enrollment ballot" good for 1,000 votes to begin with. The thing to do is to enroll at once, today, now. This $10,000 may be YOURS.

CARDINAL BACK AT RESIDENCE ON GRANBY STREET

William, Cardinal O'Connell, is now at his residence on Granby street, having come from New York, where he landed upon arrival from his visit abroad.

The Cardinal had little to say of a public nature. He had gone away solely for rest and returned thoroughly rested. Cardinal O'Connell will spend the next few days in going over diocesan business. On Monday afternoon he will go to St. John's Seminary, Brighton, where, during that week, he will be in retreat with clergy of the diocese.

THREE MEN KILLED BY BOSTON EXPRESS

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 11.—The police today tried to establish the identity of three men who were killed by the Boston bound Merchants' Limited train on the New Haven Road at the Olin street crossing. Olneyville, one of the few remaining grade crossings in the city.

The men, it is believed, were trying to board a New York bound freight train when the Limited, roaring past, sucked them beneath its wheels.

APPROVED AIDS TO HEALTH AND BEAUTY

REDUCES ENLARGED PORES—A most satisfactory remedy for reducing those large, dust-collecting pores which so frequently appear from neglect is made by stirring together an ounce of almonds, one-half pint cold water and two teaspoonfuls glycerine. Let stand a few hours before using. When a clear jelly will remove all pore dirt and fill out wrinkles when used daily. Besides it is greaseless and very fine for treating freckles, blackheads and skin roughness. This almonds and glycerine in the skin very clear, soft and velvety.

FOR HOME-MADE SHAMPOO—Rubbing the hair at home can be greatly simplified by using a teaspoonful of sanitrol dissolved in a cup of hot water. The lather of this shampoo removes all dirt and dandruff and rinses out easily. The hair will dry very quickly and be much softer, glossier and fluffier than when soap is used. This shampoo has been found very beneficial to the hair and scalp, as it does not bleach or destroy the lustre of the hair, making it brittle like alkali in soap does.

HOW TO TAKE OFF WEIGHT—The safest and surest way to reduce weight is by means of the celebrated parmelee treatment. Dissolve four ounces of parmelee in one and one-half pints hot water and take a tablespoonful before each meal. This remedy is harmless and inexpensive and can be had at any drug store. It is useless to starve and exercise to excess, as parmelee reduces rapidly without these unpleasant features. This treatment leaves the skin smooth and firm.

THIS REMOVES HAIRS—Make sufficient paste with powdered delatone and water to cover the hairy surface. Apply thickly and after two or three minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs have completely vanished. No possible harm follows the use of delatone and the skin is always left firm and smooth.

FOR UNDER-DEVELOPMENT—Scrawny necks and flat chests respond quickly to the vaseolin treatment. This is easy to prepare—just dissolve 1½ ounces sugar in a pint water and pour in 1 ounce sanitol. The dose is 2 teaspoonfuls before meals. This sets up the shrunken, stunted tissues, develops the figure and rounds out the bust.

OTTO H. KAHN SAYS HE IS COMING BACK

NEW YORK, Sept. 11. —Otto H. Kahn sailed on the Mauretania for an extended tour abroad. He will be gone until the last part of this year or the early part of next year. When asked about the rumor that he will take up his permanent residence in England and there stand for Parliament he smiled.

It could not be learned where the money came from to pay General Sickles' note.

BEAUTIFUL HAIR WOMAN'S CHARM, DON'T HAVE THIN, FADED, GRAY HAIR

A Simple Remedy Beautifies and Darkens the Hair. Cures Dandruff.

What a pity it is to see so many people with thin, wispy hair, faded or streaked with gray, and realize that most of these people might have soft, glossy, abundant hair of beautiful color and lustre if they would but use the proper treatment. There is no necessity for gray hair under sixty-five years of age, and there is no excuse for anyone, young or old, having thin, straggling hair, either full of dandruff or heavy and rank smelling with excessive oil.

You can bring back the natural color of your hair in a few days and forever rid yourself of any dandruff and loose hairs, and make your hair grow strong and beautiful by using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy. For generations common garden Sage has been used for restoring and preserving the color of the hair; and Sulphur is recognized by Scalp Specialists as being excellent for treatment of hair and scalp troubles.

If you are troubled with dandruff or itching scalp, or if your hair is losing its color or coming out, get a fifty cent bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur from your druggist, and notice the improvement in the appearance of your hair after a few days' treatment.

ROSE PATH FOR T. R. IN OREGON

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 11.—Upon a blanket of roses Colonel Roosevelt walked from his train here today to his automobile. The rosy path was the idea of the Progressive leaders to typify the roseate hue upon the third party horizon in Oregon.

One hundred dozen roses were strung upon the path trod from his train to an automobile outside the depot by the ex-President. The original idea of the Bull Moose leaders was to toss the roses at the Colonel, but the chief of police objected. He said some crank might throw something other than a flower.

In an imposing parade the ex-President was escorted to the Hotel Oregon, where he conferred with leaders in the Progressive fight. The Colonel was informed that plans for launching a complete third party ticket in the State have been completed.

"Fine!" exclaimed the ex-President. "We'll do the trick in Oregon just as we will do it in Washington, California, Colorado and the other States of the Northwest.

This afternoon the ex-President goes upon an automobile ride and speaks before an assemblage of mothers and children. The main speech of the day will be late in the afternoon at the Gypsy Smith Auditorium.

FOSS TO OPEN FIGHT TOMORROW EVENING

Governor Foss will formally open his campaign for the nomination at rallies to be held tomorrow night in Springfield, Chicopee Falls and Holyoke.

POLITICAL NEWS

Robert Clarkson, who received the Democratic nomination for the Senate in the district comprising Wards 20 and 21 last year, and made a good showing election day, is one of a number of candidates again this year for the nomination.

Little Johnny Sheehan of Ward 9, a Home candidate, is buttonholing every voter he meets in his travels through the South End. Johnny has a way of explaining the "issues" about the "third term" idea. This makes his third attempt to win a nomination. He says Abraham Lincoln, like Rory O'More, believed in odd numbers when running for political office.

Former Congressman Michael J. McEttrick is confident of winning a House nomination in Ward 17. He became famous a number of years ago as a pedestrian, and expects to walk from his home on Mount Pleasant avenue to the State House during the legislative session next year. He is being supported by Congressman Curley and the Ward 17 Tammany Club.

Martin Lomasney is conducting his campaign for renomination in Ward 8 by means of personal interviews with his constituents. Same story and the same winning way.

The high cost of living does not interfere with the different candidates for the Democratic or Republican nomination throughout the city. A visit to any of the restaurants any time before midnight especially in the South End and Roxbury, will find pork chops, planked steaks and lobster salads laid out in front of the candidates and the favored constituents.

Tom Giblin is wearing a hat similar to the one worn by former President Roosevelt when he spoke in Boston recently. Giblin is a candidate for a House nomination in Ward 1, East Boston.

Accused Diplomat in Court

Marian McVickar Foster Tragic Figure in Nolan Case.

MARIAN M. FOSTER

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Marian McVickar Foster, the sixteen-year-old girl who was arrested Monday with the young diplomat, Harry E. Nolan, sat in the Tombs Court and trembled as she watched the grave procedure.

This more child, thrust suddenly from a stern, quiet home in Scotland to the freedom of America, married to a man she did not love, and misled—if the police charges are true—by another man whom she trusted, has become a figure of unusual human interest.

Her husband, James Foster of Newport News, Va., and her brother, William McVickar, of the same city, have come here to appear in the strange case against Nolan.

But Marian, small, pretty, bewildered, is the really tragic figure. She clung pitifully to the arm of the Tombs matron in the courtroom and looked with eyes of fear, not of affection, at Nolan when he appeared before the court. She confided that she wanted only to go back home to Scotland.

Nolan, newly appointed secretary of the American Legation at Panama, created a stir in court by his indifference to the legal procedure. The girl was gazing at him from a seat near the aisle when he entered, but he did not look at her. He appeared to be annoyed by the public interest in the affair.

When Magistrate Murphy saw there was no representative of the District Attorney's office present he became indignant.

"Where is the Assistant District Attorney?" he demanded. "It is a public scandal the way these Assistant District Attorneys shirk their work."

After a few minutes Mr. Reynolds of Mr. Whitman's staff appeared. Attorney Gerard, representing Nolan, asked for an adjournment for two weeks. One week was granted.

The question of bail came up, and while the magistrate was considering the matter, Nolan calmly walked out of the court room.

When the magistrate missed him, he sent two detectives to locate the supposed fugitive. They found him with his attorney, and he returned to the court with the explanation that he thought a stay of a week had been granted, and that that released him temporarily. He was held for further hearing, the cash bond of $1,000 being continued.

BIRD UNOPPOSED FOR GOVERNORSHIP AMONG THE MOOSE

Charles S. Bird of Waltham is unopposed for the nomination for Governor on the Progressive ticket, it is announced at the Moose headquarters. There is harmony also regarding the other candidates in the post card canvass soon to be held. There are few contests for the party nomination to any office, except in the congressional districts, where, in a few cases, there is more than one candidate. Several prospective contests have been eliminated by the withdrawal of one candidate.

WILSON TO TAKE SERIES OF TRIPS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11.—An extensive series of stumping trips is to be made by Governor Woodrow Wilson, Democratic candidate for the presidency. This was announced by the governor today while he was travelling from Atlantic City to Jersey City to be the guest of a Democratic club. He stated that he would make a trip similar to the western trip planned for next week every week hereafter until the campaign is over.

The trips are now being arranged by the Democratic campaign committee and will embrace practically every doubtful State in the Union exclusive of the Pacific coast States. The Governor will not be able to go to the coast.

It was not the Governor's intention at the outset of the campaign to make many long trips or to deliver many speeches. He had announced that he would make most of his speeches in the State of New Jersey and that he would visit only a few important points outside of the State.

Acting Chairman McAdoo has within the last few days perused the candidate, however, that a fairly complete tour of the country is necessary.

Governor Wilson in a speech to the United Spanish War veterans at Atlantic City declared he wished party battles could be waged with less personal passion and more passion for the common good.

The trouble with this country, said the Governor, is that it has been blindly at war within itself by a competition of interests when this should have been a union of interests. The way not to cure it is to set one class against another. The way to cure it is to see that classes understand one another; that they all know that there is such a thing as a common interest which touches them all alike.

I belong to a political party. For the time being I represent a political party; but I respect a political party merely as the means of banding men together for a service.

I wish that party battles could be fought with less personal passion and more passion for the common good. I am not interested in fighting persons, but I am interested in fighting things. I am interested in fighting bad tendencies, bad systems, things that lower all the levels of our political and economic morality.

We must get, before we are through with our politics, the same vision that the soldier gets—that it doesn't make any difference what part of the country he comes from, there is something that binds him to his fellows which he cannot break without committing treason. That is the bond of common understanding that he is engaged in a cause and that only the cause can make him great.

RILEY INSISTS THAT PELLETIER 'IS NOT DEALING WITH FACTS'

Chairman Riley of the Democratic State Committee asserts that District Attorney Pelletier is not dealing with the facts when he charges that the Wilson campaign in this State is being directed by the State chairman in order that he Riley's statement says, in part:

may support Governor Foss.

BOSTON NEWSBOYS GREET GUILDS ON ARRIVAL TODAY

The Boston Newsboys' Association has appointed a committee to greet Ambassador and Mrs. Curtis Guild when they land today from the steamship Laconia on their return from Russia. Scores of friends of the former Massachusetts Governor and his wife will be at the dock to present their greetings. POPE GREETS BIG CONGRESS

VIENNA, Sept. 11.—Greetings of Pope Pius X. to the twenty-third Eucharistic Congress, which is in session in this city, were delivered to the 150,000 delegates and visitors in attendance today when Cardinal Von Rouscos, the papal legate, read the papal message to the multitude in St. Stephen's cathedral.

Although the congress opened yesterday, the serious business of the great ecclesiastical gathering did not begin until the festival assembly was started today in St. Stephens. Following the reading of the papal brief, addresses were delivered setting forth the principles of the congress.

Stock Markets Are Dull and Lack Features

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, Sept. 11.—Midday—The local stock market was quiet at the beginning and this characteristic prevailed during the morning. Before the end of the first hour trading had become dull and prices irregular, with most active issues showing losses. Among those to advance were U. S. Smelting, Wolverine, Butte & Superior and East Butte.

Mining issues that received included Calumet & Arizona, La Salle, Santa Fe, Superior and Utah Copper. United Fruit sold a point lower and American Telephone was fractionally off.

It was a market which lacked interest as a whole.

Alaska Gold Mines was firm on the Curb and continued the feature in that market.

Roads Gain at Start.

Railroads made a little better showing when the New York market opened, several selling higher and helping along what was a general advance. The market was moderately strong and active at the start. In regard to railroads, Missouri Pacific scored what was about the best real gain on the strength of its earnings' report, while others to go higher were Erie common, Pennsylvania, Reading, Lehigh Valley, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific. Amalgamated was higher at the beginning, but receded. American Smelting common opened with a gain of ¼ and soon increased it to ¾. Canadian Pacific was off on the first sale, but later recovered. Sears, Roebuck & Co. sold several points lower because of profit taking. It opened at 210½.

The Curb was steady.

Americans in London were firm.

Copper Lower in London.

The London copper metal market opened dull, and with spot and futures 1s. 3d. lower.

December buying in this country is now reported but transaction for that delivery are understood to have been small. October and November transactions are large. It is said that Europeans are finding it hard to get spot supplies and are also short for what they need for next month.

Thompson, Towle & Co. quote S. S. Rosenbaum, associated with Adolph Lewisohn, as saying after his return from abroad: "The condition existing in Europe at the present time is practically the reverse of what it was in the United States eight months ago. At that time Europe was alive to the copper situation and was purchasing its copper, while the United States was withholding from taking on a large amount of the metal, pursuing a hand-to-mouth buying policy. Now the situation is reversed. The United States has recently been taking on larger supplies, while Europe is buying merely for its immediate requirements, and consumers there are apparently adopting former American consumers' methods of purchasing the red metal."

Financial News in Brief.

The United States Steel Corporation received orders in August at the rate of 50,000 tons a day and made shipments at the rate of 42,000.

Otto H. Kahn of Kahn, Loeb & Co., who is now on the way to Europe, denies he is going to abandon New York and live in London. He says he will come back.

August railroad earnings were good on the whole. Thirty-six report for the fourth week an aggregate increase of $1,528,000, or 7.52 per cent.

One explanation of the stock market's lethargy in the face of good news as to crops, steel and copper is that the temporary depletion of the bank reserves has forced the withdrawal of many speculative loans. A change is expected by the middle of the month, however, when dividend and interest disbursements begin to return to the banks.

It is said that he number of United States Steel Corporation shareholders is about 140,000, which is more than high record. There has been a big investment movement in Steel shares by thrifty wage earners and small salaried persons.

The Missouri Pacific still retains its stock interests in the Wabash. "Mop" now owning 28,262 shares of the preferred and 28,262 of the common.

Victor H. Olmstead, Agricultural Department Statistic Chief, thinks the country's crop of cereals will total 133,016,000 tons. This will give an idea of what weight railroads will have to haul.

Hornblower & Weeks say that "Prominent bank presidents state that business is good and will not be affected by the political situation."

Hayden, Stone & Co. announce that certificates for Alaska Gold Mines Co. will be ready for delivery at their office, in exchange for temporary receipts, on and after 10 a. m. today.

The American Woolen Co. has declared a regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent. on preferred stock. The Boston Belting Co. has declared a regular quarterly dividend of $2 a share.

Recent advances in the price of lead have put it on the highest level in five years and the activity in white lead and spelter is the reason.

The increase in the Texas cotton crop this year, as compared with last is estimated all the way from 200,000 to 500,000 bales.

A Denver dispatch states that the El Paso Consolidated Gold Mines has voted to increase the par value of stock from $1 to $5 and to reduce the number of shares from 2,500,000 to 500,000. A quarterly dividend of 2 per cent. was declared. The last previous dividend of 1 per cent. on old stock was declared June 29.

The Boston Financial News says there is apparently no question but that Bethlehem Steel preferred will go on a dividend basis within the next six months, and that after that time it will pay 7 per cent. a year regularly.

Hughes' Hughes was about the first man to pitch his camp on the course and, from now until the holding of the 1912 classic, news of phenomenal times can be expected.

It now transpires that the car that won the French Grand Prix race and the two comprising the same team will not compete in America. Although it had been stated that they were now on their way to this country, the fact remains that they are still in France and will unquestionably remain there. The Peugeots will not compete in this year's Grand Prize or Vanderbilt.

AUTOPSY SHOWS WOMAN CHOKED

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Every move made by Attorney Burton W. Gibson, central figure in the mystery surrounding the death of the Countess Rosa Meuschik Szabo, was watched by detectives today. They were ready to arrest him upon a charge of murder as soon as a warrant was issued, which may not be until late today, if witnesses are summoned to Orange.

Detectives guarded his home at Rutherford, N. J., during the night. The iron nerve that marked his attitude when the investigation of the countess' death began had almost deserted him. He got little sleep, pacing the floor almost all night. Two detectives kept guard within his own house, and others were outside.

In one of the rooms lay his wife, hysterical and under the care of a physician. The lawyer's nerve has been remarkable. The break came, however, when reporters told him a warrant would be issued against him as the autopsy showed the countess had been strangled. He recovered quickly. He even showed no signs of emotion when a hooting mob followed him through the streets jeering and insulting him and gleefully announcing by one another that at last "Gyp the Blood" had been captured.

Gibson came to his office in New York early today accompanied by a detective. He had apparently recovered his calmness.

"I am here in my office," he said, "if the sheriff of Orange County wants me, he can find me at my desk."

Then Gibson turned to dictate to a stenographer letters that had no possible bearing upon his present predicament.

Burton W. Gibson of New York and Rutherford, N. J., was the personal attorney and friend of Countess Rosi Meuschik Szabo, who was drowned in Greenwood Lake while rowing with Gibson the afternoon of July 16. Both were in their bathing suits. Gibson returning to shore after the tragedy, said that the Countess fell overboard while she was attempting to exchange places with him in the boat. A tear in his boser is explained by saying that she grasped it in attempting to save herself from going over.

Drowning was accepted by the authorities as the cause of death and the body was buried, in a cheap pine coffin, in one of the poorest lots of New York Bay cemetery. No services was read over it.

Shortly after her death, Gibson produced a will leaving her $18,000 estate to her mother, who, the Austrian authorities say had been dead two years when the will was drawn. The will was probated by a woman posing as the mother.

RED BANDANNA HARMONY PLEA

The Baxter wing of Progressive Republicans, who believe that the Grand Old Republican party in Massachusetts should not be disrupted even for Theodore Roosevelt, today threw their hat right into the ring of the Red Bandanna contingent.

Following a stirring meeting at the Parker House word was sent to Matthew Hale, who leads the third party in Massachusetts, that the real way to do things was as it was done in Maine, that there should be no split among Republicans in Massachusetts, and that the Bull Moose contingent should stop putting up candidates for Congress and the Legislature.

Fusion along the lines of the Maine condition, with Republicans lining up in a compact and united body for all State offices and Congressmen, was demanded today by the Baxter progressives from Chairman Hale of the Roosevelt men.

The Progressive Republicans want to have it that Taft can be voted against by Republicans who see fit, but that no separate State ticket shall be put into the field to endanger Republican success in the State.

Chairman Hale's answer, it was announced at the Roosevelt headquarters this afternoon, would be that the Republican machine in Massachusetts is in the scrap heap, and that separate nominations, regardless of who might be hurt, would be made in every Congressional, Senatorial and Representative district in the State.

Republican leaders see in such a condition nothing less than Republican party disruption in Massachusetts.

AUTO CLUB SEES CLUBHOUSE PLANS

Members of the Massachusetts Automobile Club considered at a special meeting at their clubhouse on Boylston street this afternoon, sketches, plans and estimates of their proposed new clubhouse, to be erected at Beacon street and Commonwealth avenue. Governor Foss offered to build a six-story clubhouse in the Back Bay which would accommodate a larger membership. This building will cost about $300,000 and may be leased by the club for $35,000 a year. The matter of proceeding with this building was what was before the members today.

BIRD HEADS BULL MOOSES IN NORFOLK

Charles S. Bird of Walpole, slated for the Bull Moose nomination for Governor, today agreed to head an association of Progressives in Norfolk County. Other officers of the association will be: Vice-presidents, George F. Washburn of Weston, Leon A. Pratt of Hyde Park, Charles W. Franklin of Dorchester and James P. Roberts of Quincy; secretary, John E. Savage of Mattapan; treasurer, George L. Baudry of Milton.

THREE YEARS FOR SLASHER.

SENTIMENTS fraternal and paternal inspire us to send this word of greeting as your new store opens.

For while we are not affiliated with you even remotely in a business way, and while your location is such that you must be regarded first of all as competitors, we cannot overlook the fact that your present store home was the cradle of the house of William Filene's Sons Company.

No success can come out of those old walls too great to gratify us.

For the sake of the old building, therefore, and in behalf of its new occupants, we extend a neighbor's hand of greeting and the good wishes of good friends.

HAINES PUTS T. R. IN ANANIAS CLUB

WATERVILLE, Me., Sept. 11.—Governor-elect William T. Haines today branded as "lies" the published stories of an inside "deal" between him and Colonel Roosevelt to secure the support of the Republican standpatters.

"That story is a pack of lies," said Governor-elect Haines today. "Colonel Roosevelt has no letter from me."

The Governor-elect refused to say any more or to answer the question whether or not he is with the Colonel and against Taft.

The story of the "deal" as told today is a remarkable one. It was given out by no less personage than the Colonel himself in a long telegram from Tacoma, Washington, reading as follows.

What Colonel Wired.

"We," declared the Colonel with one of his bland smiles, "named for the Governor of Maine the man the Progressives wanted and he wrote to me that he hoped we would not make a fight against him; that he was for me, and that he would come out for us after the election.

"I have just received word that he carried the State and that in accordance with his promise he had come out for the Progressive National ticket."

Some of the wise ones in certain parts of the State suspected that Haines had strong Moose leanings, but they were Moosers themselves and kept it quiet. The Governor-elect, himself, confirmed their suspicions in his first public utterance after he knew he was elected.

And Haines Told, Too.

That was at Waterville on Monday night. He made a little speech, the nub of which was:

"I believe in the square-deal policy of the great Theodore Roosevelt."

But even after that the facts did not puncture the epidermis of the G. O. P. elephant.

The President of the United States, apparently not realising what had happened, sent Governor-elect Haines this message:

Hon. William T. Haines, Waterville, Me.—I congratulate you on redeeming Maine. It is a notable and significant victory WILLIAM H. TAFT.

Colonel Roosevelt, also might have wired, that "it is a notable and significant victory."

The significance of the election to the Democrats, however, is that Wilson is certain to carry the State in the national election, unless the Bull Moosers with the stars they have, succeed in completely swallowing the other wing of the party.

MILLION ROSEBUDS SHOWERED DOWN ON PARADE OF G. A. R.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 11.—While a million roseburds were showered down upon them, the veterans of the G. A. R. marched today in the great parade of their annual encampment.

For four miles between lines of thousands of spectators the old soldiers made their way. Every precaution was taken to prevent accident or injury. The day was cool and clear, but emergency hospitals were stationed at frequent intervals.

Wires were run to hold the crowds back and all cross streets were closed from the time the parade started.

The city gave its streets over entirely to the veterans.

At the head of the column marched a gigantic 48 and drum corps.

'THAIS' SCORES AT ST. JAMES

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

It is indeed a bold manager who shows no fear when brought face to face with the demands of a play like "Thais"—a play that requires not only skill and intelligent acting but a massive production as well. Thais" is not to be taken lightly, for it is no small matter however you approach it.

It was plain that Mr. Gulesian takes both himself and his company at the St. James Theatre seriously, to say nothing of his public, for the "Thais" that was shown on Huntington avenue yesterday went deep into the heavy side of the drama and not a member of the new company was scared by the trip. It was the first severe test imposed upon Mr. Gulesian's acting organization and it ended happily.

One might be pardoned for mildly doubting the ability of a stock company in such an emergency, but doubts were scattered when the big audience settled itself in comfortable chairs and waited for the returns.

Gorgeous Stage Settings.

When Mr. Gulesian first announced his intention of giving "Thais" he promised a complete and adequate production. This is merely recalled at this time to remind you that Mr. Gulesian has kept his word. A considerable portion of the success of the play at the St. James may be found in the gorgeous stage settings which Mr. Gulesian coaxed away from Joseph M. Gaites for the occasion. Mr. Gaites' original production, discarded by him after the New York run of the play, added much to the beauty of yesterday's performance. It gave Mr. Gulesian's efforts a more pretentious background than is usually found in stock productions.

The dramatic story of the courtesan who turned herself to the narrow path of virtue and the monk who lost his moral bearings after a long career of righteousness, suggested no serious obstacles to the acted folk at the St. James. They tumbled into their new surroundings gracefully and serenely. Miss Katherine Grey played Thais with an easy familiarity that suggested a former relationship with the role. She caught the spirit of the somewhat doubtful heroine of Paul Wilstach's play and treated her audience to many moments of really fine acting. She handled herself skilfully in easy trying scene, and read her lines as if their meaning were understood and felt. Miss Grey had nothing to regret after the final curtain.

Theodore Friebus easily affected the godly monk, Daniel, giving splendid power to the role. Mr. Friebus' characterization held his audience to close attention. He seemed sure of himself at all times. The Nicias of Robert T. Haines was a faithful reproduction of the lively young man about town of twenty centuries ago. He loved his wine and his women with an ardor that would be suppressed by the Watch and Ward Society in these modern and rectual days.

Well Worth While.

Upon Miss Grey, Mr. Friebus and Mr. Haines fell most of the argument, and it may be reported that they were always on duty.

The performance had some defects, naturally, but these were most mechanical. The defects, however, only served to emphasize the excellence of interpretation in the important details, none of which was overlooked or treated carelessly.

"Thais" will contribute a generous share to Mr. Gulesian's early season success. Its presentation was well worth any unusual labor it may have demanded.

Knox Views Body of the Late Mikado; Meets the New Ruler

TOKIO, Sept. 11.—Secretary of State Philander C. Knox, special envoy of the United States to the funeral of the late Emperor Mutsuhito, and Mrs. Knox, were received in audience today by Emperor Yoshihito, the new Mikado.

The Emperor chatted with the American statesman and spoke of the cordial relations existing between the two countries. He showed a deep knowledge of American affairs.

Mr. and Mrs. Knox were later guests of Emperor Yoshihito and Empress Sadikho at luncheon in the imperial palace.

Following the luncheon Mr. and Mrs. Knox paid a visit to the chamber where the remains of the late Mikado are lying in state. This was the most impressive part of the day's ceremonies. Around the bier when the party entered the death room were a number of the members of the imperial household, who have kept unceasing vigil since the Mikado's death on July 30.

BIGGEST CATCH OF MACKEREL IN

All T Wharf records for a single day's receipt of fish were broken today when fourteen mackerel-men landed 352,400 fresh fish and 1068 barrels of salt. And thereby hangs a tale.

The mackerel played a joke this Summer on the fishermen. Along in May the fleet of 120 vessels sailed to follow the fish up the coast from the South. But they had mighty poor luck. One by one the schooners quit. Only a score stuck. Mackerel prices went up. The fish have been to forty cents apiece, wholesale, and sometimes this Summer you couldn't get a fresh mackerel on the waterfront.

By this time all the mackerel generally are gone long since from off the coast to the mysterious place, wherever it is, in which they pass the Winter. But the scote of persevering vessels the other day ran into great schools of mackerel off Nantucket. Never before were the fish known to be hereabouts at this time of year. And they were big ones. Captain Hardy of the Mary E. Hardy, showed today a mackerel twenty-five inches long, weighing seven and a half pounds, dressed. T Wharf never saw such a bouncer.

MEXICANS HOLD YANKEE MINER

DOUGLAS, Ariz., Sept. 11.—Walter Douglas, general manager of the Phelps Dodge mining interests in Mexico, is a prisoner of Mexican rebels south of here, according to advices received today. Douglas is said to have been seized by rebels when traveling between Agua Prieta and Nacozari. Wires have been cut and definite news of his fate has not been received.

The news of the capture has caused great excitement. It has increased the feeling of indignation here against the rebels, and it is feared reprisals may be attempted.

PIPE DREAMS

THE EX-CHAMP.

Oh, he was a sport
And had stones by the quart
And a roll that was bulging and yellow.

They all ordered wine
When the going was fine,
And declared him a regular fellow.

But a wallop one day
Rudely stowed him away,
And his roll blew away like a feather.

They were chilly as ice
When he asked for the price,
And replied: "Ain't it beautiful weather!"

FIFTEENTH WIN BY WOOD IS O. K.

the validity of Joe Wood's claim to yesterday's game as his fifteenth straight victory.

The objection could not stand as the question raised had been settled by rulings already made by President Ban B. Johnson of the American League on Wood's case in two previous games. Under those rulings Wood's claim to yesterday's contest could not fairly be disputed.

The White Sox made four runs off Wood in one inning, Sunday, July 28, at Chicago. The Red Sox had five runs at the time. Wood was relieved by Bedient and thereafter neither team scored a run. In his ruling as to the number of straight victories scored by Wood, would go in the Box-ton AMERICAN last week, President Johnson officially gave Wood the credit for winning that game.

The situation was reversed on August 10, at Fenway Park, when the Tigers played here. Collins was in the box and Detroit scored three runs off him. In the lucky seventh," Boston scored five. Then Wood went into the box and, thereafter, each side scored a run, the final score being 9 to 4 in Boston's favor. Some Boston scorers credited Wood with the victory, but President Johnson gave the credit to Collins.

Yesterday Wood pitched eight innings and the score was 5 to 3 in favor of Boston with two on and none out in the ninth, when Holt went in to pitch one of the men on base scored and the final tally was 5 to 4 in favor of Boston.

So the ruling, which has operated once in Wood's favor and once against him, again applies in his favor and yesterday's was his fifteenth straight official victory.

Had Ban Johnson reversed himself, ruling that Wood didn't win yesterday, it would not break Joe's winning streak. He could step out there and try just as hard as he pleases to pass the record established by Rube Marquard.

It was the fact that Hall finished the game for Wood that brought up the question. The ninth dawned with the Red Sox leading the South Siders 5 to 3. Mattick, the first man up, slammed out a double and Lord cracked a single.

That put Sox runners on first and third with none goog and two needed to tie. Manager Stahl immediately waved Wood to the bench and Hall to the slab. Collins popped out and Borton hit a sacrifice fly that scored Mattick. Lord was out stealing and the game belonged to the Red Sox.

Then the question arose as to whether Wood or Hall was entitled to the credit for winning. It seemed to the writer that Hall by winning run was not on the bases and must have been put there by Hall, if at all, that the victory should go to Wood.

The worst that could happen to the Red Sox if both of the Chicago runners on base at the time of the pinch scored was a tie. Seems to a reasonable man that Wood is entitled to the victory.

But there are those who figure that a man knocked from the slab should never be credited with a win.

PILGRIMS AND CUBS IN SECOND

The sadly battered Cubs, minus their leader, Frank Chance, clash with the hopeless Pilgrims today, in the second game of their last series at the South End Park this season.

The Cubs are certainly in a dilapidated state these days, for with their two backstops, Needham and Archer, out on account of injuries, Schulte on the in-bad list and Evers cooling off on the bench for a run in with an umpire, they look anything but the club that has been giving the Giants the scare of their lives during the past few weeks.

Chance left the team yesterday in charge of Joe Tinker and is scouting over the International League circuit looking for a catcher that can fill in.

The Pilgrims should grasp the opportunity of grabbing off a few games while they are ripe. Manager Kling will make an effort to capture today's contest for he will use either Hub Perdue or Hess.

Diamond Gossip

Ty Cobb is batting more than 150 points better than his brother Paul. And Ty faces pitchers fully twice as good. Which seems to prove that batting doesn't always run in families.

Divinity Student Ferryman, of the Richmond team, the Original Man of Sorrow, has found out how to win a game. He does it by pitching shut-out ball. Otherwise, nothing doing. The man who goes to the Giants this Fall worked that stunt recently, and thanks to the fact that his teammates piled up the unprecedented number of nine run behind him, he copped.

Pittsburgh figures that if Babe Adams had not been injured the Pirates would be up around the top today. As it is, they have accepted third place as the best possible, and changed the subject.

Catcher Ray Schalk, for whom the White Sox gave $10,000, is the second catcher who cost so much. The other was Mike Kelly. Other players who cost that much or more were O'Toole, Marquard, Russell and Clarkson.

Schalk was born at Harrel, Ill., of German parents. He is five feet ten inches tall and weighs 170 pounds. He started his last season with the Taylorville, Ill., team. Milwaukee paid $1,000 for him.

Barney Dreyfuss has promised to sue the Pennsylvania Railroad because it did not get his team from Cincinnati to Pittsburgh in time for the Labor Day games. Barney had sold 30,000 tickets for the games.

Bobby Quinn, the business manager of the Columbus Club, wants to form an Ohio league, with clubs at Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus, Toledo and four leagueburgs. If he is interested to know he's continuous bush league ball draws he's advised to consult Colonel Heinemn, late president of the New Orleans (Cotton States League) Club.

Joe McGinnity, the rusty Iron Man, has handed Rochester nine defeats this season. The old boy seems to have something on 'em.

New York papers say Tommy McMillan times his throws as well as Bill Dahlen ever did—and Bill was a regular chronometer at that.

It is given as expert big league opinion that on a dark day the only way to see Joe Wood's speed is to attach a lantern to it.

Four out of the ten leading base stealers in the National League are Giants. One out of the ten best in the American is a Red Sox. This may spell something in the coming world's series. But something that read very like this didn't spell a thing in the last world's series.

28-Inning Ball Game Played by Teams of Roxbury Youngsters

Out in Roxbury today they forgot about the Red Sox and discussed the twenty-eight-inning game on the Columbus Avenue Playground by the Willow A. C. Juniors and St. Philip's Altar Boys of Roxbury. The former won, 5 to 4.

The game began at 10 o'clock and didn't stop until 2:30. There were few hits and up to the twenty-sixth inning it was 2 to 2. In that inning each team scored a run. The twenty-seventh inning saw no change, but in the first half of the twenty-eighth Willow A. C. got two runs. St. Philip's in its half scored once. For people in the neighborhood it made a continuous performance and a mighty interesting one. The news of the battle spread and there was plenty of time to have dinner and go around and see the finish.

RED SOX RILEY'S COLUMN PILGRIMS

JOE WOOD has won his fifteenth straight game, 5 to 4. But it required some jockeying to make it a sure thing. Which shows Jake Stahl's wisdom in dodging Jimmy Callahan on behalf of "Big Ed" Walsh. Also it illustrates what a tremendous strain tense pitchers' battles work upon the mound heroes.

FRESH from his world-famous victory over Walter Johnson, Joe arrived in Chicago to find awaiting him a challenge from Callahan to meet Walsh on the mound. With the incentive of last week's tremendous crowd in Boston to inspire them, Callahan and his boss, Comiskey, sought to fill their coffers in Chicago at Wood's expense.

* * *

JAKE STAHL wisely side-stepped the match and, in order to prevent any clamor for it, he unexpectedly injected Wood into the first game of the White Sox series. It was tough on Wood to ask him to pitch so soon after last Friday's gruelling struggle, but it would have been tougher had Wood been asked to enter another battle of the kind with Walsh in less than a week after he had finished Walter Johnson.

* * *

WOOD is one of the greatest pitchers in the country has ever seen, but he is not a miracle, by any means. Like all other creatures of flesh and bone, he has his limits. In no other sport would the champion be asked to work for two hours under the most frightful strain a week after he had undergone a similar experience defending his title. Baseball players of the championship class have to work as hard as champion pugilists and champion athletes of every other kind. And they have to go through the strain oftener. It takes all a man has to fight the battle Wood fought last Friday, and he showed the effects of it yesterday.

CHARLIE HALL, the faithful "wrecking crew," had to go to Wood's rescue in the ninth inning, as Joe has often gone to the rescue of Hall and others, and "Chick" saved Wood's bacon. There's no jealousy, or envy, or disposition to throw down the hero in that boy. Hall. He has the Red Sox spirit. Neither he, nor any other Sox, would see Joe lose that race for the world's championship for any consideration whatever. Hall is willing to do his duty as a rescuer right along, and trust to sportsmanlike "fans" to give him the credit he deserves in the end.

WE have not heard what Stahl had to say about it, but it's safe to guess that when Jake heard of Callahan's challenge, he argued thus. Wood has beaten Walsh many a time. He beat him fairly and decisively the last time they met. As good a pitcher as Walsh is, he has no present standing that would justify him in demanding a match with Wood, particularly when he has everything to gain and nothing to lose, while Wood has everything to lose and little to gain. The only possible result for the Red Sox is such a duel would be about $2,000 or $3,000 additional receipts—because they don't pay to see those things elsewhere as they do in Boston. And against that comparatively small sum, Stahl would have to risk the pitcher who has won the Sox pennant, who must be relied upon to win the world series and who is entitled to have a fair and square deal—taking his opponents as they come in the regular course of events —in his race for the world's championship for successive victories.

* * *

BY using Wood yesterday, Stahl should have his speed boy in shape to pitch Saturday against the Browns, who are "soft pickings" for Wood. On that day, "Smokey Joe" may be expected to win his sixteenth straight, tying Walter Johnson's American League record. If Wood has an easy time of it, as he usually has with the Browns, he may work in one of the next week's Cleveland games, and on the following Saturday, may pitch against Detroit. Joe may do as he pleases about that. If he does go through that way and wins, it will give him eighteen straight victories before the Sox return here, September 24. Then he could pitch against the Yankees in the attempt to make his nineteenth successive win, before a home crowd, tying "Rube" Marquard's world record if he succeeds. By such an arrangement, Wood could then have the entire remaining Athletics and Senators series in which to accomplish the twentieth straight victory, which would establish him, beyond all cavil, as the greatest pitcher the world has ever known.

OF course, this is all "dope." We cannot look ahead and see what Wood will actually do, but for two years past we have always expressed confidence through the columns of the AMERICAN, that Wood would eventually establish himself as the greatest of all pitchers, and this confidence, stated in the AMERICAN day after day throughout this season, has been justified by results up to date.

YOU must remember that Wood is only twenty-two, and that he has not nearly reached his zenith yet. Two years from now, he should be a greater pitcher than he is today—if he and his managers wisely handle him.

YESTERDAY'S tough siege at Chicago was not an indication that there is anything the matter with Wood. Last week's duel and the policy of Stahl in working him ahead of his turn this week did it. And Joe didn't care ill at that. But for an error or two he would have slipped through with flying colors.

Gov. Dix to Prevent Wolgast-Packey Bout

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 11.—Governor Dix has taken steps to prevent the proposed ten-round bout between Ad Wolgast, the lightweight champion, and Packey McFarland of Chicago, at Madison Square Garden, New York, the latter part of the month.

In a letter to Julius Harburger, sheriff of New York County, the Governor says complaints have been filed with him to the effect that this bout "is being arranged under such circumstances as will virtually amount to a prize fight." He calls upon the sheriff to use every means to stop the contest.

In a letter to District Attorney Whitman the Governor requests him to cooperate with Sheriff Harburger.

The Governor also sent a letter to Frank O'Neil, chairman of the State Athletic Commission, calling for an immediate report as to whether a license has been issued by the Commission authorizing this bout.

SCHOOLBOY NOTES

Coach Dane of Waltham High has a hard problem to solve this year. But a small number of candidates reported, and among them were but five veterans of one year, Gagon, Day, Healy, Johnson and Pendleton having played on the team last year. The first game will be played next Saturday with Melrose High, at Waltham, and Dane is working overtime getting his boys into condition.

* * *

Everett High should again have a rattling good team. Coach Cleo O'Donnell will use the greater part of his veterans back, and with his set of heavy rushing backs many wins should be registered under this year's rules.

* * *

The Malden High boys are strong for Ralph Good, the former Colby star and former pitcher on the Boston Nationals. Good has had several years' experience at coaching at the Coburn Institute, and all the athletes at Malden believe he is the right man to turn out winning teams.

* * *

Captain Johnnie Dwyer of Medford High expects another championship for the blue and white. Medford will have a new coach in Carroll, but the boys are confident that he can develop a good team out of the material at hand. Jack Lawless will not play for Medford this season as he expects to enter Dean Academy.

* * *

Cambridge High and Latin will be up against it this year in getting out a winning eleven. Practically all of the players of last season's team have left school, and the new material is none too good. No coach has been elected as yet, but one will soon be appointed and work will commence.

* * *

Captain Doane of the Somerville High team has got out his candidates for first practice this afternoon on the Somerville High Field. Doane will have a fairly husky aggregation to build up a team from, and it appears as if the red and blue will cause much trouble in the Suburban League this Fall.

* * *

The Newton High boys are already figuring on winning the Triangular League championship. Coach Alle Dickenson will have practically all of last year's team back, while Brookline High and Cambridge Latin will be hard hit by the loss of their veterans.

HARVARD '16 BEGINS PRACTICE TUESDAY

Football practice for the freshman team at Harvard will begin next Tuesday, September 17, at the Stadium. The men, who will number about fifty, will be in charge of "Tudor" Gardiner, a lineman on last year's varsity team.

Loughrey and Picato in Draw Plenty Action in Pilgrim Bouts

By JACK CONWAY.

THERE was plenty of action in the three star bouts at the Pilgrim A. A. last night. None of the men displayed much boxing skill and it was a case of give and take in each contest.

The main bout of the evening was between Frank Picato of California and Frank Loughrey, the scrappy Quincy boy. The affair was called a draw after ten rounds of hard battling to which both men gave and took a lot of punishment. First one boxer and then the other would gain an advantage and a draw decision was the only one possible under the circumstances.

Al Lippe, the gentleman who poses as Loughrey's manager, was very much grieved when Referee Maffitt Flaherty called the bout a draw and he whispered a few cruel words into the big lifle guard's ear as he wended his way through the crowd to the dressing room.

Lippe tried to persuade Maffit that his decision was a poor one but the Philadelphian must be feeling the effects of a hot Summer or else the writers' strike at the Boston hotels has got on his nerves, for Loughrey did not have any shade on his opponent.

In fact, if we were forced to give a fair line decision or be shot at sunrise we would probably present the laurels to Picato. But let me assure you that we would not pull off the presentation while Lippe was within shooting distance for we have it on good authority that he is not the kind of individual who permits anybody to offend his artistic or pugilistic temperament—I don't know which—and still live.

PICATO made a fine showing. He is a willing two-handed fighter who doesn't know much about sidestepping and ducking. He is continually following his opponent around the ring and is willing to take two or three punches in order to land one lusty wallop.

Loughrey also likes to mix things. It was therefore a use of Greek vs. Greek. Neither man clinched to any great extent and there were few dull moments in the entire ten rounds. Picato was guilty of hitting low on several occasions but it could be easily seen that he did not do so intentionally.

TOMMY HOWELL of Philadelphia won from Jimmy Moriarty, the battle scarred Lowell blacksmith, after nine rounds of good fighting. Dave Kurtz of New York was originally scheduled to clash with Howell but he notified the club yesterday that he had injured one of his hands and would be unable to box. Moriarty was then secured. He had not trained for the go, but went in and made a creditable showing.

Moriarty had the best of the mixing in the early rounds. He let Howell come to him and he would then try for a sharp right hand punch over the heart followed by a left to the head. The scored time and again with this punch.

Howell, however, was too young and strong for the veteran from the Spindle City. He rushed him around the ring and landed stinging rights and lefts.

During his career in the ring, Moriarty has had most of his front teeth knocked out and he got them replaced by a false plate. In the ninth round, Howell landed a snappy left to the jaw which pushed the plate far back into Moriarty's mouth, causing the blood to flow in torrents. When he went to his corner at the end of the round he was in poor condition and his seconds tossed up the sponge.

THE first bout of the evening was between Pave Deshler of Cambridge and Johnny Willetts, who has done some good work in Philadelphia during the past year. The boxer from the city beyond the Charles, and which is also famed as being the home of fair Harvard, won the decision. Dave appears to still have a few more good fights left in his system. He completely outclassed Willetts in the first six rounds. In the third round he knocked him down for the count of nine twice. Willetts came strong in the latter part of the bout and won the plaudits of the "fans."

* * *

JACK BRITTON, the wonderful Chicago boxer who knocked out Eddie Murphy in eleven rounds two weeks ago, has been signed to meet Young Saylor of Indianapolis at the Pilgrim A. A. on next Tuesday night. Saylor defeated Battling Nelson at the Armory A. A. last Fall. He was billed to meet Matty Baldwin at the Arena recently but flunked out of the match at the last moment, claiming that he was ill. It was believed at the time that he had cold feet but he must be game for he is about the only lightweight in the country who is willing to take a chance with Mr. Britton.

Bates Football Team Starts Fall Practice

LEWISTON, Me., Sept. 11.—The Bates College football team started in on its Fall practice today. Of last year's team, Captain Cole, Shay, Bolster, R. Emmerl, Juneau and O'Connell will not return this Fall. This leaves Thompson, Dansby, Leavitt, Moore, Sheppard, Harding, Talbot, Eldridge and Captain Dennis.

Physical Director Royce D. Furbish is very fortunate in securing the services of Frank R. Moody, a former captain at Bates, as assistant. Manager J. H. Plumstead, 1913, has issued a football schedule. It does not include the Harvard game. The schedule:

Sept. 21—M. I. C. at Lewiston.
Sept. 27—Dartmouth at Hanover.
Oct. 2—N. H. State at Lewiston.
Oct. 11—Exeter at Bates.
Oct. 19—Ft. McKinley at Lewiston.
Oct. 25—Maine at Lewiston.
Nov. 1—Bowdoin at Brunswick.
Nov. 8—Colby at Waterville.

REDS SIGN AMATEUR.

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 11.—"Chick" Smith, a left-hand pitcher who has been playing with amateur teams in this city has been signed by the Cincinnati National League club.

Exeter Candidates to Be Called Next Week

EXETER, N. H., Sept. 11.—Phillips Exeter's football season will open next Wednesday, when Coach "tiG's" Zeigler will arrive and call out his men. The date of the opening of the school is September 19, and the returning athletes will see many improvements at Plimpton Field. The dressing room has been completed and a veranda extends all the way round the building, making it an attractive as well as most convenient structure for the players to dress. It will be supplied with lockers and a shower bath.

It will be a decided innovation for the eleven this year to have "Ted" Jones, the former Yale star, in town, and he will undoubtedly be able to give some time to assistance in the coaching. Thus far none of the football eleven have arrived. Coach Zeigler is in Boston and Capt. Kirkpatrick has spent the Summer in that section.

The schedule will open on September 28, when Exeter plays the second game with Cushing Academy, which is the only preparatory school to get a game with Exeter this year, the other games being with the freshman elevens of the large colleges. The games follow in order, October 5, Dartmouth freshmen; 12, Bates College; 19, Yale freshmen, and November 9, Andover.

All games will be played at Exeter with the exception of the Andover game. Exeter supporters are anxious to see what effect the new rules will have on the game, as during the six years the former rules were in effect not a single game was won against Andover.

MARANVILLE MAKES GOOD

"Kid" Maranville, the New England League shortstop, made his bow to Boston big leaguers in this Pilgrims-Cubs series. "Kid" Maranville made good.

The abbreviated lad, who is not much taller than one of Bill Sweeney's trusty war clubs, is in today's match with the National League pace followers, and while he is built close to the ground he'll show that there is a whole lot of baseball packed in his diminutive stature.

The "Kid," as he has already been dubbed, made a hit with the crowd yesterday. He is a half pint less than "Stubby Bill" Jones, and "Stubby Bill" would hardly fill a gallon jug. He looks like he would have to leap to catch a grasshopper. But he gets there.

Busiest Boy in Boston.

Johnny Kling inserted "the kid" into yesterday's game, and he was the busiest boy in Boston. In the second inning, with Titus and Devlin on the sacks, and one run under cover, "Kid" Maranville was sent in with instructions to bunt. He did. The ball bounced down "Heinie" Zimmerman's alley and "Heinie," being built on the ten story plan, overlooked "the kid" entirely —so much so that he threw very, very carelessly towards First Baseman Saier and "the kid," with his legs working like piston rods, was at second base and Titus was at the beach before the ball was recovered.

Thereafter, Devlin scored on Hartley's sacrifice fly, and the Pilgrims led the ball game, 3 to 1. The Cubs tied it up in the third, but that was because Bill Sweeney overthrew the plate. It wasn't "the kid's" fault.

In the next inning Maranville did not contribute to the score at all, but in the sixth, a cloud of Colonel Melley's sooty smoke drifted over the field. Pitcher Cheney could not see "the kid" and passed him along on four balls. Maranville slipped along a base on Hartley's out and when Campbell shot a single over second base, he dashed home like a flash. He went so fast, and was so small, that the umpire could barely see him as he whizzed over the rubber. This effort gave Boston the lead. After that, Cheney took no more chances with Maranville and struck him out.

He was just as busy in the field. In the third inning Zimmerman, the mighty cloutter, drove one on to him on the first bound and it looked like the ball would go clean through him—and, going through, would leave nothing but the rim of a derby hat. But he gathered the ball and tossed to Sweeney in time to force out Tinker at second.

"Knocked Down" the "Champ."

In the fifth the same Champion Zimmerman drove a safe hit over Maranville's head—that is it would have been a safe hit if "the kid" had no springs in his legs. But he leaped and speared the ball, retiring "Heinie" and ending the inning. In the seventh he had a chance to catch Cheney at the plate, when Miller hit a high bounder which he plentily knocked down. But a throw the ball a bit wide. At that, Cheney would have been out, but Raridan dropped the throw and the Cubs tied the score. Miller later tallied-ed in the last inning reported, making it 6-4.

MISS AMY WEBB

(A Ziegfeld beauty in the "Winsome Widow" Co.).

By AMY WEBB

WHEN I was a little girl it worried me greatly because my eyebrows and eyelashes were so very light and so faint that they were barely perceptible.

I must have looked like an animated question mark, for nothing makes the face look so inquisitive, not to say foolish, as extremely light and faint eyebrows, and while it's all right in a child, it becomes very distressing as one gets older.

So one day, in real despair, I set to work and clipped such meagre eyebrows as I had and cut them off completely. Then I got a little girl friend to cut off my eyelashes, too, because I had read somewhere that that would make them grow.

Nobody noticed that anything especial had happened to my appearance until it suddenly dawned upon the family at the supper table that I had lost my already slender claims to good looks, and that they had been sacrificed upon the altar of early vanity.

What is the use of remembering past scoldings? I got a very good one, which I remember to this day. Also my eyelashes did not come in for a long time, and finally I had to be taken to a doctor and salve was applied every night to make the hair grow. Sometimes the salve got into my eyes and made them smart, and at all events the performance made an indelible impression on my memory, so I have come to think nice eyebrows and eyelashes quite invaluable to good looks.

A Great Help

As clipping them proved perfectly useless, in my case, I doubt if it is of any use at all, though I know it is frequently recommended. However, if the eyebrows are too scant, a little vaseline will generally make them grow, and so will hair tonic if you use it regularly.

Many people would have beautiful eyebrows if they only took a little care of them, and I often wonder why it is that girls who want to be pretty don't pay more attention to this very important feature.

In the first place there are the eyebrows, which look dirty and untidy, because there are tiny particles of dandruff in them. I think this can be all removed if the eyebrows are scrubbed out every day, using the nail brush and soap.

Another thing that I find most unpleasant to look at are the wild-looking eyebrows which one sees even on young girls. These looks as if they need brushing and combing, sometimes even brushing; they are so wild looking and coarse.

No one has to be inflicted with eyebrows like this. The coarse hairs can be pulled out and the eyebrows trained into better behavior by brushing them once a day with a tiny brush dipped in olive oil or cocoanut oil. Brushing is very good for the eyebrows, and one can give them a nice shape and make them look neat and prettily arched simply by using a brush and a little oil.

The long, straight, archless, narrow and delicately pencilled eyebrow was the old ideal, "but the modern eyebrow, at least the one which our modern artists like Christy, Gibson, James Montgomery Flagg and Hutt draw on their pretty girls, is not the straight kind, but the highly arched brow. If you can made your eyebrows look as if they were very far away from your eyes, the eye will look larger and the face more refined.

When the eyebrows are very scant, it is usually a sign of poor health, except in red-haired persons. These scant eyebrows can be strengthened by constant brushing, and they can be made to look darker by combing them with soapy water and letting the soap dry on them.

A great many people have eyebrows that meet over the bridge of the nose. This is supposed to be the sign of a jealous or melancholy disposition. I suppose if you can't change your disposition it would be no harm to take away the guide post and pull out those quite superfluous hairs.

How to Train Them

Eyebrows can be trimmed into almost any shape with a little ten-cent pair of tweezers, and there is no reason why one should allow them to grow across the nose or to scatter, as they sometimes do, right in the middle of the arch.

Very few girls have the pencilled eyebrow which is supposed to be such a natural beauty. More of them have eyebrows that are made with a pencil, and look it. It is really not necessary to color the eyebrows artificially, unless they are absolutely white, or flax-blonde—then they can sometimes be darkened by brushing them with strong, black tea. Let the tea get just as dark as possible, have eyebrows clean and free from grease, and brush the tea over them.

Massaging the eyebrows, pinching them and kneading the flesh beneath with the forefingers and thumb will often stimulate the growth and is another way of making the line shapely.

I think that many girls make a great mistake when they pencil an otherwise fine line of eyebrow, making it darker and thicker. These thick lines not only look artificial, but they take away from the refinement of the face and make it look coarse and heavy.

For myself, I cultivate my eyebrows with a tiny little brush dipped in glycerine and rosewater, half and half. I would no more think of going on the street without brushing my eyebrows than I would go out with my hair untidy, or my shoes not polished, for I believe that the eyebrow has so much to do with making the face pleasing and attractive, and especially in making one look tidy and well dressed.

Married Life the Third Year

No. 73.—The Last Night in London. They Have Supper at a Fashionable Hotel.

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

WARREN leaned out of the cab window and gazed down the block-aded street.

"Jove, looks like every taxi in London is jammed in around here."

"But we'll soon get through, won't we?" asked Helen anxiously.

"Don't know about that. A mix-up in these narrow London streets is no joke."

Here their cab moved up a few feet. Helen leaned forward hopefully. But the driver was only getting closer into line with those ahead.

"If we stay here much longer we'll have to cut out that supper," glancing at his watch by the light from the street. "Everything closes here at 12:30. It's 10:55 now. That was a long show."

"Twelve thirty? Why, surely the theatre supper places don't close that early?"

"I said everything, didn't I? The law here is to close at 12:30 sharp, and it's enforced, too. No getting around it as they do in America. At 12:30 the place has to be dark and everybody out."

Here the cab moved up another few feet. Helen looked out anxiously. She had so often heard of "supper at the Savoy" that it would be a real disappointment not to go. If only they hadn't left it for the last night!

But at length the policeman untangled the mass of cabs and taxis and they were allowed to make their way through.

When they reached the Savoy, Warren hurried her in and pointed out the ladies' cloak room down the great arched corridor.

At the Savoy

"Now you'll have to hustle. I'll check my coat and meet you here in two minutes."

Helen was surprised at the luxurious appointments of the dressing room. There were at least a dozen mahogany toilet tables, arrayed with their silver brushes, powder boxes and hand mirrors.

The maids were busy checking evening wraps and adjusting gowns that had been disarranged in the theatre or the cab. The air was stifling with powder and perfume.

Helen checked her wrap and hurried out to the lobby, where Warren was waiting impatiently.

"Going to have a devil of a time getting a table here," he grumbled as they entered the restaurant.

Large as the place was, every table seemed filled. Helen's first impression was of the brilliancy of the scene. Everywhere were glimmering jewels and bare white necks and shoulders.

One of the head waiters led them through the main room to a small table back in an alcove.

"Can't you do better than this?" asked Warren.

"Afraid not, sir. You see, everything is taken except those tables back of the posts."

"This is not so bad," ventured Helen. "We can see very well from here."

"All right, then. Suppose there's no use putting up a kick in a place like this. Haven't more than forty minutes, anyway."

"Dear, have you noticed that not a single woman is wearing a hat?" whispered Helen. "Don't they allow them?"

"No. You couldn't get in any smart supper place here with a hat. It's only in America they allow the women to spoil a scene like this with their immense head gear."

Here the waiter placed before them some kind of jellied broth in tall, thin cups.

The Food Clamor

"What's this?" Warren took up the silver bound supper card, but it was printed in French, and he threw it down in disgust. However, the card was unnecessary, for the waiter quickly brought on one course after another. It was the regular after-theatre supper, and there was evidently no choice of dishes.

"They've got this thing down pretty fine," explained Warren. "They've got to get you fed and get you out by 12:30, so they're not giving you a chance to order. Now, what in thunder's this?" poking disdainfully at a tiny white paper case containing an unknown spoonful. "I'd like to know when they're going to bring us something to eat. So far we've had nothing but these fancy little dabs. I'd like some food."

But plainly the idea of this supper was not to give nourishment, but rather entertainment in the form of many samples of highly decorated and unknown concoctions.

"Hugh," grunted Warren, as he eyed the latest morsel of culinary art that had been placed before him. "I'd give the whole supper for a good roast beef sandwich. Wager they'll charge enough for it, too," glancing at the supper card. "Supper, eight shillings," was printed at the bottom. "Eight shillings, and all of it hasn't the nourishment of a good plate of soup."

"Why, that 18 high, dear. Everywhere else over here we've found the food so good and so cheap, and many of the places have been just as beautiful as this."

"Oh, well, we're paying for 'smartness' now. This is the joint where London society is supposed to come after the theatre, and where Americans go to look them over. So that old girl over there staring through her lorgnette"]

"Why, she doesn't look like an American," protested Helen.

"Maybe not. Guess they size each other up some, too."

As to Gowns

"But the English women DO know how to wear evening gowns."

"Of course. That's the only thing they can wear decently. They look like their street clothes are thrown at 'em. But they usually have good neck and shoulders, and can trail around in a long-tailed gown all right."

"And they dress their hair so gracefully; I love the way they coil it low on the neck. They don't wear a lot of bands and aigrettes as we do."

"They're some enough to know it's not becoming. Who wants to see a woman's hair bristling with a lot of gew-gaws? Makes 'em look like Fiji Islanders."

"Oh, look how low that woman's dress is—the one over there in pale blue. Why, Warren, they do wear their gowns cut very low!"

"Well, I told you English women have good necks and shoulders, and they want to show 'em. Now, what sort of a looking is that?" as the waiter placed before them still another mouthful of French cuisine. "Looks lonesome on that plate."

But Helen was so absorbed in the scene about them that she hardly noticed the supper.

"Quarter after twelve," announced Warren, glancing at his watch. "They'll have to get a move on 'em now mighty soon."

"Dear, you don't mean they can clear this great place in a quarter of an hour."

"Just wait and see."

Helen looked around in wonderment. Every one was laughing and talking as leisurely as though time was not a factor. It seemed incredible that in a few moments they must all be out.

Now the waiter brought the coffee and the bill. And Helen noticed that waiters all over the room were presenting their checks. The next intimation was a sudden turning off of some of the lights.

Wraps and Scraps

The room was perceptibly darkened. A number of parties rose reluctantly from their tables.

More lights went out. Only those under the frescoed edge of the ceiling were left. Every one was on his feet now and all began moving in a mass toward the doors. When, a moment later, the last of the lights flashed out, the place was almost cleared.

The lobbies and dressing rooms were hopelessly crowded. Helen thought she would never get her wrap.

"Oh, I beg your pardon," as a stout lady in black chiffon and diamonds stepped squarely on her toes. "Yes, I hope to see you at Lady Ashton's garden party on Thursday."

But this last remark was not addressed to Helen, but to a tall woman in white satin and silver fringe which was crowded against her. Helen caught many interesting bits of conversation while she waited. Finally she got her wrap and pushed her way out to Warren.

Then there was another long wait for a taxi. They stood outside while one cab after another was filled and driven away. The silk hats and cape coats of the men, and the long white wraps, satin slippers and uncovered heads of the women reminded Helen of the illustrations of an ultra-society novel.

"Dear, that was really a very brilliant crowd," she mused, as at last they drove off.

"Huh!" as Warren settled himself back in the cab. "Must be a pretty hungry crowd by now, if they didn't get any more to eat than we did. If everything wasn't shut up I'd stop in a good lunch room and get a glass of milk."

The Ideal Woman

I DREAM of you, love, day and night,
I dream of you, O dear delight,
And all your matchless beauties:
I dream of your submissive way
And ceaseless heartaches to display
Your skill in wifely duties.

Your voice is very sweet and low,
And never raised to blame, I know.
Your brow no frown may furrow;
Though mine are views the rest condemn,
The foolish fault is not with them
Is your adoption thorough.

Nought in your conduct or attire
Shows or suggests, my dear desire,
The woman who is modern;
You keep to fashion's styles the rage,
The notice women will, whose ways
Are more than somewhat odd, earn.

So, dearest, whom I must adore,
I dream of you, to whom is more
Than this poor praise of mine due,
But ah! I do but dream of you,
For on this earth, 'tis sad as true
That I can never find you.

A Bachelor's Diary

HE PROTESTS AGAINST BEING ENGAGED

By MAX.

AUGUST, 16.—This thing is getting serious.

And by "this thing" I mean my alleged engagement to Beth Leonard.

On my oath, as an honorable man, Diary, I never asked that girl to marry me. I never had such a thought in my mind. I never had even a momentary affection for her, and in my brief intercourse with her I was simply a by-stander, amused at her wit, and the manner in which she defended herself against the wit of others.

I never twitted her about being an old maid, as the others did. I never expressed the hope that she would succeed so well in business that she could some day take over my business affairs, too, as the other men did.

I never held her hand or made eyes at her, or paid her a compliment. Yet she walks into my house deliberately and uninvited and when she departed it was with a good-night reference to me as her fiance.

Great heavens, are all men married off in that way?

Driven Out

I telephoned Tomkins yesterday that I would not be home to dinner. Why? Because I have been driven out of my house by a WOMAN! To think that I would ever come to this!

Beth has a way of coming over here every evening. Sometimes I find her waiting for me when I come home to dinner, and sometimes it is after dinner, but here she is, evening after evening, sitting in the chair opposite me, and talking of our coming marriage with the assurance with which others speak of the sun coming up in the morning.

"Now why do you talk like that?" I had the courage to say the other night. "You are too wise a woman to want to sacrifice your career for a domestic life."

"I love you so much," she said, "that I would give it up for you if I knew fame waited for me around the corner."

"But how about me——" I began——

"I know you don't want me to make such a sacrifice, Max," she said: "That is just like you, so big, and generous, and noble. Any other man wouldn't think of what a woman is giving up, but you are different. You were cast in heroic mould, Max darling."

And the man who was cast in heroic mould grumbled like a volcano inside him, and erupted nothing more serious than sheepish grins.

Every woman with any charm can do what she pleases with a man. Let the man that desires this come to my house some evening, and sit there, alone and unprotected, and suddenly find an arm like Beth's around his neck.

He will find what he considers a Gibraltar of strength and resistance crumbling like pie crust.

August 17.—I have tried in vain to get an answer to the question "When is a man engaged?" Having failed, I now come to you with a question that is older, and which is weighted down with many heartaches. It is this: What is a Friend?

Another Puzzle

Some one has said, I don't know who, I know it is written somewhere in a book: "A friend is one who knows all your faults, and loves you in spite of them."

That sounds well. It sounds so well that it is often quoted, and generally accepted as the best definition of the word.

I have another: What is a friend? A myth. One who has existence only in the fairy tales.

Pessimistic, no doubt, but all who have needed friends will agree that it is the right answer.

I thought I had some friends. I felt that I needed them to point a way out for me in this matrimonial coil. I went to Bardeer and told him the whole story.

He threw back his head and laughed. He roared till the windows rattled.

"Excuse me, Max," he said, when he was so exhausted he could laugh no more, "but that is the best joke of the season."

"Joke! And he was my friend!

I went to Harper, whom I had put on his feet many times when he bought on the wrong side of the market. He listened with a smile that grew broader and broader. But he did not laugh. I believe he read in my face that he didn't dare.

His Explanation

"The only thing you can do, Max," he said, "is to marry her. Either that, or an unpleasant notoriety. I knew all the time that she had picked you out for her game."

KNEW! And didn't warn me. And he was a friend!

I said, in reply to my protests against such treatment that no man felt like interfering in an affair like this.

"I understand," he said, "that she is a nice enough girl. She is agreeable, very bright, comes of a fairly good family and you might do worse."

When I tried to speak, he silenced me with this argument:

"Almost all men, Max, are married against their will. The woman, in an alarming majority, goes into matrimony as a man goes into business. He uses bait; so does she. Some women bait their hooks with flattery, and the more subtle use sympathy.

"A man as a rule, Max, is a big, hungry-hearted dog. And as unsuspecting! He has been brought up to respect Woman, to place her higher than the angels. He believes everything a women tells him. If she is interested in his little hopes, his two-by-four ambitions and his disappointments, he no more doubts her sincerity than he would doubt the sincerity of his mother.

"It would not dare say this out loud. The women would drive me out of the country if I did. But the trouble, Max, is that we men have been raised wrong. We have been brought up to think all women angels. We have to have suffered God alone knows, because we have had to learn by painful experience that most of them are not."

August 18—I have telegraphed Miss Hill to get Manette and come home. I want to tell her face to face that I am not engaged to Miss Leonard before some of these fool rumors reach her.

One Happy Face

It was the first night of a new play.

"I say," remarked the author to the Manager, "that scene shifter over there is a peculiar looking fellow."

"Yes; he's an Eskimo," said the manager.

"An Eskimo?" What on earth made you take him on?"

"Oh, I thought it would be a comfort to see one happy face if the play turns out to be a frost."

Safe, Anyhow

She—Guess my age, Captain Kilkinney.
He—I wouldn't take the liberty, but you don't look it.

Demure Grace in New Coiffures

Paris is setting a new fashion for wearing the hair, and as usual with the fashions set by the beauties of the French capital, they strike a distinctive and original note.

Two of these new ways of wearing the hair are shown here. One of them, the first, to the left, has as its chief feature the great mass into which the hair is coiled at the back of the head. This is held in place with tortoise shell combs.

The second coiffure, that to the right, is a waved effect. The hair is parted on the left side and waved in deep undulations over the ears. Then it is gathered into a twisted coil above the nape of neck.

One Who Woos the Muses

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"LISTEN, darling, to love's refrain:
Don't let my pleading be in vain.
How I long to caress, and call you dear.
And am happy only when you are near.
Think of my sad and lonely life;
How I miss the care of a loving wife.
No one to watch for my coming home.
When night draws near and work is done.
No little babies to romp on the floor
And laugh with delight as I enter the door;
No one to greet me with heart and hand,
A lonely life has the bachelor man.
Listen, darling, to Love's refrain.
Don't let my pleading be in vain.
That some day you will cheer this life,
And promise to be my own sweet wife."

IN these words B. C. tries to express his love for a girl he wants to marry. "I have been corresponding with her for some time," he writes, "and want to marry her, but am too bashful to propose. Could she say 'Yes' after reading that poem?"

Now that is a question that only the girl herself can answer. Love comes in many disguises, and if it comes in its familiar form, or dressed like a harlequin, it makes little difference to the woman who is waiting for it. So it is Love, that is all she asks.

B. C. has spent many hours, no doubt, on this poem. If he had spent less, and written simply, "I love you; will you be my wife?" the appeal would have been just as eloquent and just as convincing.

But I am glad he spent the time in this way. It will show the girl that time is no object when finding favor in her eyes is at stake.

Neither is any effort wasted that is spent in pleasing her. He wrote that poem by the sweat of his brow, and a picture of him hunting for words that rhymed, and pursuing that hunt laboriously and without complaint, makes a vision that will always stand out, bright and glorified, in her memory.

There may be those who will take such a poem apart and dissect it, finding much that is wrong with rhyme and metre. But never among that number is there ever found the woman to whom such a poem is addressed.

If a woman is a college graduate, and has a learning that makes Minerva envious, and receives a letter which says "I luv you," she sees no fault with capitalization or spelling. She may be a spectacled, world-conceded, and will find no fault with the meter of a poem like that which heads the article. That is, if it is addressed to HER.

Love is a disarming little god; when he comes all carping and criticising end. B. B. A., who receives a love letter, is as oblivious to the blunders it contains as though he, or she, were still engaged in wrestling with the A. B. C's of the primer.

So I say to this man who has put all his heart into this poem, By all means send it. If the girl, in her acceptance, makes a single criticism, complete happiness will never result from marrying her.

For the girl who loves a man as a man should be loved to make their future happiness secure, thinks he is a genius. If his genius finds expression in rhyme, then neither Milton, nor Burns, nor Longfellow, nor any others whom the world has honored, can compare with him.

PART I.—(Continued)

WOULD he take it as an invitation to come in? No, no; she was not ready for such an encounter yet. He might speak Edith's name; Oswald might hear and—with a gasp she recognized the closeness of his step; heard it lag, almost halt just where the path to the house ran into the roadside. But it passed on. He was not going to force an interview yet. She could hear him retreating further and further away. The event was not for this day, thank God! She would have one night at least in which to prepare herself.

With a sense of relief so great that she realized, for one shocked moment, the full extent of her fears, she hastened back into the sitting room, with her collection of books and pamphlets. A low voice greeted her. It came from the adjoining room.

"Doris, come here, sweet child. I want you."

How she would have bounded joyously at the summons, had not that Dread raised its bony finger in every call from that dearly loved voice. As it was, her feet moved slowly, lingering at the sound. But they carried her to his side at last, and once there, she smiled.

"See what an armful!" she cried in joyous greeting, as she held out the bundle she had brought. "You will be amused all day. Only, do not tire yourself."

"I do not want the papers, Doris; not yet. There's something else which must come first. Doris, I have decided to let you write to her. I'm so much better now, she will not feel alarmed. I must—must get a word from her. I'm starving for it. I lie here and can think of nothing else. A message—one little message of six short words would set me on my feet again. So get your paper and pen, dear child, and write her one of your prettiest letters."

Had he loved her he would have perceived the chill which shook her whole body as he spoke. But his first thought, his penetrating thought, was not for her and he saw only the answering glance, the patient smile. She had not expected him to see more. She knew that she was quite safe from the divining look; otherwise he would have known her secret long ago.

A Hard Task

"I'm ready," said she. But she did not lay down her bundle. She was not ready for her task, poor child. She quailed before it. She crushed so much that she feared to stir lest he should see that she had no command over her movements.

The man who watched without seeing wondered that she stood so still and spoke so briefly. But only for a moment. He thought he understood her hesitation, and a look of great earnestness replaced his former one of grave decision.

"I know that in doing this I am going beyond my sacred compact with Miss Challoner," he said. "I never thought of illness—at least, of illness on my part. I never dreamed that I, always so full of life, could know such feebleness as this, feebleness which is all of the body, Doris, leaving the mind free to dream and long. Talk of her, child. Tell me all over again just how she looked and spoke that day you saw her in New York."

"Would it not be better for me to write my letter first? Papa will be coming soon and Trudie can never cook your bird as you like it."

Surprised now by something not quite natural in her manner, he caught at her hand and held her as she was moving away.

"You are tired," said he. "I've wearied you with my commission and complaints. Forgive me, dear child, and——"

"You are mistaken," she interrupted softly. "I am not tired; I only wished to do the important thing first. Shall I get my desk? Do you really wish me to write?"

"Yes," said he, softly, dropping her hand. "I wish you to write. It will insure me good sleep, and sleep will make me strong. A few words, Doris; just a few words."

She nodded, turning quickly away to hide her tears. His smile had gone to her very soul. It was always a beautiful one, his chief personal attraction, but at this moment it seemed to concentrate within it the unspoken fervors and the boundless expectations of a great love, and she who was the sins and cause of all this sweetness lay in unresponsive silence in a distant tomb!

But Doris' own smile was not lacking in encouragement and beauty when she came back a few minutes later and sat down by his side to write. His mein before it, leaving his eyes very earnest as he watched her bending figure and the hard-worked hand at its unaccustomed task.

"I must give her daily exercise," he decided within himself. "That look of pain shows how difficult this work is for her. It must be made easy at any cost to my time. Such beauty calls for accomplishment. I must not neglect so plain a duty."

Meantime, she was struggling to find words in face of that great Dread. She had written Dear Miss Challoner and was staring in horror at the soulless words. Only her sense of duty upheld her. Gladly would she have torn the sheet in two and rushed away. How could she add sentences to the hollow phrase, the mere employment of which seemed a sacrilege. Dear Miss Challoner. Oh, she was dear but—

A Letter to the Dead

Unconsciously the young head drooped, and the pen slid from her hand.

"I cannot," she murmured, "I cannot think what to say."

"Shall I help you?" came softly from the bed. "I'll try and not forget that it is Doris writing."

"If you will be so good," she answered, with renewed courage. "I can put the words down if you will only find them for me."

"Write then: 'Dear Miss Challoner.'"

"I have already written that."

"Why do you shudder?"

"I'm cold. I've been cold all day. But never mind that, Mr. Brotherson. Tell me how to begin my letter."

"This way. 'I've not been able to answer your kind letter, because I have had to play nurse for some three or four weeks to a very fretful and exacting patient.' Have you written that?"

A Chance Today for Every Boy and Girl

The Public Schools Are Opening

(Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner.

This is the great week of the year all over the United States. It is the week of the opening of the public schools.

Millions of children begin again the year of study, of mental work—a year of hope and opportunity.

In the great city schools of iron and brick and glass the children go in hundreds of thousands—a great procession blocking the streets at the morning and evening hours.

In the country, on lonesome hillsides, the small schools are opening, patient women are ready for the work that means so little pay and so little gratitude, and a few children gather from far and near under the slanting shingle roof and the flag that flies above it.

No week means as much as this week of school opening to the people of the United States, and especially TO THE FUTURE OF THE UNITED STATES.

At the opening of school fathers and mothers should talk to their children and impress upon them what the public schools mean.

For ages human beings were ruled, they were miserable, oppressed and helpless, BECAUSE THEY WERE IGNORANT.

Very slowly the people at the bottom moved toward the top. Slowly and painfully, in one country after another, they acquired the greatest of all rights, THE RIGHT TO KNOWLEDGE.

In this country, more than in any other, that right has been developed.

Every boy and girl who will may learn. The wonderful art of printing and the knowledge of reading open all science, all history, everything that is worth while to the mind of every child.

The boys as they go to school today look very much alike and not very much alike. The big boys tease the little boys, and the little boys retaliate, when they dare.

A spirit looking down from above upon the children would see little difference. But the difference is there, and it is largely in the spirit in which the opening of school is greeted.

Try to make your children realize that school is THEIR OPPORTUNITY. Make them feel that when the school doors open it means more to them than if the door of some great mine of Aladdin's wealth were opened before them.

Wealth without knowledge is nothing. Knowledge alone makes possession worth while.

Tell your boys and girls how the greatest success in the world has been won by study, and usually by children who had little opportunity—except the chance to get knowledge.

Make them understand how long it has taken to establish public schools and let everybody learn.

Tell your little boy that he has as good a chance today as any boy born in the country—IF HE WILL TAKE IT.

Make your little girl feel that what the school teaches to her she will teach to her children in the future and do work as important as that of any man.

Interest yourself in the school life of your children, in their studies, in their success, and especially in their disappointments and school sorrows—those sorrows are very real to little children.

If you can do so, become acquainted with the teacher in whose hands your children are placed. Make the teacher feel that you appreciate the work that the teacher does—the greatest work in the world.

Make your children realize what they owe to the teacher—OBEDIENCE, RESPECT AND GRATITUDE.

The public schools open, the door of knowledge is unlocked, the possibility of success is there—it is the greatest week in the greatest country in the world.

Maine Election a Warning

While the standpat Republicans and the Roosevelt Progressives are each claiming to have been the real victors in the Maine election, it is worth while to examine the real results of that election.

The most important result is the defeat of Senator Gardner, a splendid Progressive, whose principles and record could not for a moment be challenged by the most progressive Republican.

But the saddest result of all is that Senator Gardner must give place to a standpat, reactionary Republican of the old Hale, Aldrich, Cannon, Penrose type. Whether Governor-elect Haines is a Roosevelt or a Taft man is of little significance compared with the change of one of Maine's Senators from the progressive to the reactionaray column.

A place in the United States Senate is a place of power in this country for good or evil, beside which the office of Governor of a State pales into insignificance. The United States Senate is the most powerful deliberative body in the world. Its membership is small and the term of office is long.

If this loss of a progressive Senator is a victory of which the new party is proud, then the new movement is not what it seems to be or what it pretends to be.

The facility with which the Republicans came together in Maine is a most significant warning to those Democrats of Massachusetts who think it safe to set aside a winning Governor in order to try what is at best an experiment.

Those who would displace Governor Foss, after they have studied the Maine election returns, are men who are either willing or who actually want to see the Democratic party defeated at the polls next November.

The Panama Canal Situation

(From The Republic)

Mr. Hearst, in his latest letter from London, summarizes the position of the United States on the Panama Canal situation in a manner which, we think, expresses the point of view of the thinking citizens of this country. Those people who have not been abroad have no idea of the prejudice generally existing throughout Europe against this country. The spirit shown by many English newspapers after the victory of the American team at Stockholm is more prevalent throughout Europe than is generally supposed. Under these circumstances to submit the question of the user of the Panama Canal to persons who are known beforehand to be inimical, generally speaking, would be a foolish piece of business on the part of the American nation. Mr. Hearst very truthfully says:

"To submit the rights of the United States in the Panama Canal to arbitration at The Hague tribunal is to submit a question of vital importance to the United States to the representatives whose interests are directly opposed to those of the United States. In the first place, the majority of the Powers represented at The Hague tribunal are European and Asiatic Powers—un-American Powers—and these foreign Powers have ideas of government and of social and political rights opposed to those of the United States.

"In the second place, these foreign Powers have, as a rule, actual material interests diametrically opposed to those of the United States.

"The Hague court is essentially a foreign court in its constituent parts and in its sympathy and sentiment. Therefore, questions which are intimately and peculiarly American cannot be safely submitted to it.

"There is no better illustration of this fact than the one to be derived from the Panama Canal question. The United States built the canal after a European nation had failed to build it. The United States built the canal entirely with its own money and with its own efforts and enterprise. The United States acquired finally as its own absolute property the territory through which the canal passes. The canal zone, therefore, is as much a possession of the United States as the District of Columbia, in which the Capitol at Washington is situated. The canal is a domestic possession of the United States and our property rights in the canal are fully established by purchase."

Rearing of American Children; Mothers Should Impress Upon Them the Great Value of Good Manners and Deportment

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal-Examiner

YOU may be happy in the thought that you are progressive.

You are interested in everything which can help the world along.

You study political economy, you believe in equal rights; you are a good economical housekeeper; you are a cultured woman; and you take an active part in all movements which trend toward social betterment.

But what part are you taking in the bringing up of your children?

American children have the reputation abroad of appalling ill-manners. It is almost universally merited.

On board a large ocean liner (the passenger list composed of many nationalities) four children at a table in the dining room were noticeable for their bad breeding. They were handsome children, well dressed and carefully groomed. But they laughed loudly, stared at neighboring tables, made audible comments upon people, whispered and pointed, and giggled, until some of the other passengers called the attention of the head steward to their annoying peculiarities, and they were requested to behave themselves in a seemly manner.

These children were from America, and the most offensive of the four was the twelve-year-old daughter of an American banker. They had been given governesses, tutors, schooling and travel benefits, but they had never received the refined training of a wise mother. Otherwise they could not have shown such vulgar and offensive traits.

Children are born mere hungry little animals. They have no way of knowing what is good taste, and what is kind, and what is graceful and agreeable, unless they are taught by their elders. All refined manners are things of growth, from the animal state to the higher human state. It has been a thing of slow evolution.

Our remote ancestors all ate ravenously and used their hands to tear food into morsels. They smacked their lips, and made loud sounds and drank noisily. They flung their limbs about ungracefully and picked their teeth with thorns or slivers, and they did not hesitate to slap and bite and kick one another when angry, as animals do.

Gradually an idea dawned upon these more highly developed creatures that there was such a thing as behavior, and that it was something for which to strive—something better than mere impulse.

So through eons of time good manners developed, and the more delicate and gracious the manners, the farther away the man is from the purely animal state.

Mere conventions, mere formal ceremonies, do not indicate good manners. Good manners are the result of an unselfish desire to avoid annoying others and to give pleasure to one's associates.

Children should be taught these things from the time they are able to sit upon a mother's knee. They should be taught that their hands are not to pull and tear the mother's hair, or gown, or slap her face or otherwise be offensive.

A little dog can be taught that he must not jump on people, and put his paws on their laps; it requires a very short time to train the average puppy in this manner. So a small child can be taught to be gentle if the mother cares to give the time and effort. And as the child soon understands language, it can be trained by tender, sweet counsels to show courtesy in all the little daily matters of life.

American children COMMAND their parents to fetch and carry objects for pleasure and rarely say thank-you unless reminded. It is an easy matter to teach a small child to say "Pardon me, but I think you have made a mistake," where the child is confident, to an elder or a companion who has made a mistake in relating some incident. Every child has a right to express its opinion, that is the way childish minds expand; but when they say, "That's no such thing," "No you didn't either," and the parent allows the flat contradiction to pass as a proof of the child's smartness, then a great American evil is being countenanced and abetted.

American children are rarely taught to listen respectfully to their elders. They whistle, sing, and interrupt, and walk away in the midst of conversation without making an apology. Boys sit in the presence of older people who stand; they rush into and out of a room where there is conversation or music, with no apology, and usually unrebuked.

Any woman, however poor and humble, can instruct her children to be gentle mannered, courteous, and refined in voice and deportment, if she realizes the value of good manners in the world.

Good manners, without education, will pass many a man and woman through the world and into good society; but education without good manners will only enlarge a human being's opportunity to be offensive to his fellow men.

THE SCHOOL PATH

By Wilbur D. Nesbit

In Good Housekeeping Magazine for September.

DOWN the path and up the path to school he goes today,
Little does he know the path will lead so far away;
But I linger at the gate and watch him trudge the street,
Sorrowing for all the frets that wait his little feet.

Until now he was mine own, his only path led home;
Now it is a world-old path that he sets out to roam.
He thinks that he will come back, but when he comes again
In his eyes will be the light caught in the world of men.

Always on, and never back, the path he takes must lead;
Out of all the world of dream, into the world of deed.
Trials there, and victories, and futile war and quest,
Now he takes the age-old path that never gives us rest.

But the wonder of it all! The folk that he shall meet,
Heroes that are his to know, and royalty to greet;
He shall sail the sullen seas Magellan-wise, and reach
Alien land and barren strand and storm-swept reef and beach.

He shall fare through wondrous plains and climb the highest peaks
He shall know the wanderlust that comes to him who seeks.
He shall hear the cannon roar and see the saber gleam,
He shall hear the bugle call across the reddened stream.

Oh, and he shall brother, too, with all the marvel minds,
Find the hidden truths that only he who conquers finds;
He shall tread the dusty halls where learning has been stored,
He shall share the treasury of learning's miser hoard.

But he laughs and runs along, nor knows how far it is;
He must plod in weariness upon this path of his.
He hears music in the tone that surges from the bell,
Yet all selfishly I hear the measures of a knell.

Down the path; and up the path to school he goes today,
Knowing not it leads him to a world so far away.
He will come back home again, but will have left the joy
That was mine until today, when still I had my boy.
